The Down Factory Store

www.downfactorystore.com

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

"We go the distance for you."

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

A Few Hundred Thousand Could Get You Something Nice In The Hamptons

By Dan Rattiner

The man, the woman and the broker got out of the Land Rover and walked slowly up the dirt path through the woods toward the house.

"I don't see it yet," the man said.

"You can see how private it is," the broker said.

"Yes it is."

"And here we ARE!"

They were in a small clearing. The broker extended an arm, the way you would when presenting an important person to a special friend of yours. And there was the house.

"Not very big, is it?" the woman said.

"Well, appearances can be deceptive," the broker said. "It's a lot bigger on the inside than it appears. Two bedrooms. A bath. A kitchen and a living room. A back porch. It's what we call, here in the Hamptons, a cottage."

"I've heard of that," the man said brightly. "Summer cottages they called them."

"Yes they did," the broker said. "And they still do. People in the city tell their friends I'm going out to the Hamptons to my summer cottage. They've been doing this since 1875. That's when the railroad came through."

"Really?"

"That's right. J. P. Morgan. The Woolworth's. The DuPont's. All the railroad and steel barons. This was before they had income taxes."

"Was Henry Ford out here?" the man asked.

"I think he was," the broker said. "I know Marilyn Monroe came out here for several summers. Just wanted some peace and quiet away from it all. She rented a summer cottage just like this one."

"This PARTICULAR one?" the woman asked.

"No. Not that I know of, anyway."

"How much is this going to set us back?" the woman wanted to know.

"Well, for the whole summer, four hundred and fifty thousand dollars."

"That's a bit out of our price range."

"That's just for July and August. If you want June, the owners are asking another eighty thousand."

> "No, the last renter... took out all the old landscaping, brought in fabulous new landscaping, and then, when he left, took it with him."

"Can we rent it for just June?"

"Well, I don't know. What they really want to do is rent it for the summer, and then give the renter — I mean, four hundred and fifty thousand is a lot of money — the option for June in addition."

"Can we go inside?" the man asked.

"Absolutely," the broker said, taking a set of keys out of his pocket. "But why don't we walk around the house and see the grounds first?"

"That's okay with me," the woman said.

All around the house was high grass. They walked through it.

"Many mosquitoes here in the summertime?" the man asked.

"Nah. Maybe one or two."

"That's good."

"As you can see, the whole house is on one floor, which is very convenient. You don't have to run up and down stairs. And it's a compact house, a simple rectangle, so you can't get lost with a wing over here and a wing over there."

"There's not much in the way of landscaping," the man said.

"No, the last renter, last summer, I believe it was, was one of the Smiths. Will Smith the actor. Or Bob Smith, from television. And he took out all the old landscaping, brought in fabulous new landscaping and then, when he left, took it with him. You can do the same, of course."

"Bob Smith from Howdy Doody?"

"I think he rented it four years ago. Then he died. No. Bob Smith, the big network producer. Many people from Hollywood are out here."

"Will Smith is a big Hollywood name," the woman said.

"Yes, I think it was Will Smith. Will Smith from Men in Black. Wanted something small and easy to take care of. Secluded, to keep the paparazzi away. This was the place."

"What are these big metal canisters attached to the house here in the back?"

Dan Silverman
Executive Chef of Union Square Cafe. For 6 consecutive years, Union Square Cafe has been rated New York's #1 favorite restaurant by the Zagat Survey.

Come join three superstar New York chefs—and scores of New York's best and brightest from fashion, finance, the media, publishing and entertainment—for a barbecue party unlike anything the Hamptons have ever seen!

It's the "Barbecue & Beyond" party, the Hamptons' New Premiere Food Event and a memorable way to kick off your summer.

Chairman of the event, TV celebrity chef David Rosengarten, will be surrounded by a "kitchen cabinet" of Union Square Cafe's legendary kitchen team, Michael Romano, Chef-Owner, and Dan Silverman, Executive Chef.

When you sample their culinary creations at this party, you'll know why these chefs are renowned as the best in New York.

Enjoy the Barbecue Magic of Blue Smoke!

You'll also savor extraordinary barbecue delights from Blue Smoke, New York's hot new barbecue sensation and Union Square Cafe's sister restaurant.

Together these superstar chefs will serve up a barbecue party unlike anything the Hamptons have ever tasted. Reservations are limited and selling out fast. Make yours now!

Just mortgages.

And because we do one thing, and one thing only, we do it very well. In fact, when it comes to securing mortgages, people say we're the best. We'll get you the perfect mortgage. You may only need us once or twice in a lifetime. But when you do, we'll be there. Call us. You'll see. There's a lot more to mortgages than just numbers.

GIVE YOUR CHILD A HEALTHY SMILE

Many parents don't realize how early dental problems can occur, or just how important those "baby teeth" are!

Prolonged and frequent bottle or breast feeding can cause baby bottle tooth decay. Diets high in sugar from fruit roll-ups, sticky candies, juice and soda can also cause lots of cavities. Thumb and pacifier habits can cause malformations of the palate.

Children are not done losing their baby teeth until they are 12-13 years old! These teeth hold the spaces for permanent teeth, shape your child's face, and help with speech, eating and chewing.

Dr. Nancy Cosenza specializes in dentistry for children from infancy to their teenage years. At Hampton Pediatric Dental Associates, we know that not only children, but their teeth, are entirely different from adults. In fact, pediatric dentists require 2 years' additional training and education beyond dental school!

(There are only 5,000 pediatric dentists in the U.S. and we're the only pediatric dental practice in the Hamptons!)

Dr. Janet Stoess-Allen, our orthodontist, believes in early orthodotist intervention for those children who will clearly benefit from it. Early treatment presents the opportunity to influence jaw growth in a positive manner, lower the risk of trauma to protuded upper incisors, correct harmful oral habits, and improve esthetics and self-esteem!

Our office is colorfully painted and cheerfully designed - a definite "kid-friendly" environment. Our staff is geniunely warm and cheerful too!

Call us at (631) 287-8687 if you have any questions or would like to arrange an appointment.

Remember that good dental habits and experiences started in childhood will last a lifetime! We know how to make kids leave the dentist's chair smiling -- and their parents, too!

Dive Into Savings

Are you an in-ground pool owner? If you are, LIPA has a great way for you to help conserve energy and put some extra money in your pocket. All you have to do is sign up for our LIPAedge Pool Pump program.

What is the LIPAedge Pool Pump Program?

The LIPAedge Pool Pump program will allow us to turn off your pool pump for a very brief amount of time during summer periods of peak electric demand on Long Island. This would only occur a maximum of seven days during the summer and only between 2:00 p.m. and 6:00 p.m. In exchange for your cooperation in helping us better manage electric demand during peak summer usage days, we'll send you a $25 "thank you" check. And we'll keep sending you a $25 check every year you participate in our LIPAedge Pool Pump program.

To learn more about how you can benefit from LIPAedge and our many other energy-saving, money-saving programs, visit us at www.lipower.org, or call us at 1-866-547-2334.

Three Great Reasons To Buy Your Wines For The Hamptons At www.Sherry-Lehmann.com

"The Best of The Web"- Forbes, Spring 2002

Huge selection and competitive prices. Search the inventory of more than 3,000 wines by color and country, style and vintage, appellation and price. A hunt for sauvignon blanc from New Zealand served up 17 bottles, including the 1999 Lofthouse Marlborough for $15.95. Use the pull-down menu to browse popular choices like Port, Madeira and Sherries (110 choices). The keyword function helps track down specific bottles or wines whose names you partially remember. Most listings come with a brief description, a picture of the label and prices by the bottle or case. We especially like the rich menu of magnums and half bottles.
BEST: Broad selection; free shipping in New York on orders over $95.

■ Bacchus never had it so good: top-rated for quality, the "Rolls-Royce" of wine shops boasts "the city's deepest selection of expensive wines, including older Bordeaux," and "if you get the right salesperson" and it's not "crowded," shopping in this "well-appointed" East Side space can make you feel "to the manner born;" run by the Aaron family since shortly after Prohibition, it pioneered the mail-order business and has such an "incredible selection" that only part of it is on display, so if you don't see what you want, ask. –Zagat Marketplace Survey 2000/2001

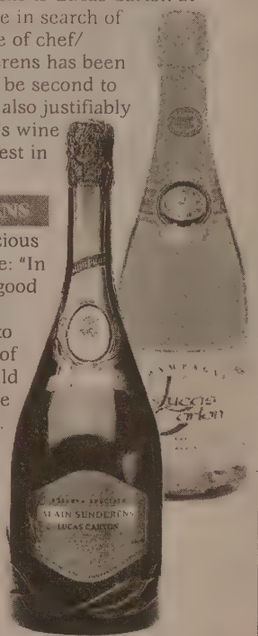
Michelin ★★★ Lucas Carton

Two Great Champagnes from Alain Senderens' Lucas Carton

Demoiselle Reserve Speciale

The famed restaurant Lucas Carton is a gastronomic temple located in the middle of Paris. The world flocks to Lucas-Carton at 9 Place de la Madeleine in search of perfection. The cuisine of chef/proprietor Alain Senderens has been acclaimed by critics to be second to none. M. Senderens is also justifiably proud of Lucas Carton's wine cellar, one of the greatest in the world.



ALAIN SENDERENS explains how this delicious Champagne came to be: "In 1993, when I met my good friend Paul-Francois Vranken, I asked him to create a special cuvée of Champagne that I would be proud to serve to the guests of Lucas Carton. After a great amount of research the magical M. Vranken created this Special Reserve Champagne Demoiselle for my restaurant.

THE TASTE

"Those are propane tanks," the broker said. "They provide the gas for heating the house. And for the hot water and the gas stove. We get a big electrical storm and the electricity goes out everywhere else and you're still in business. People will come over. Steven Spielberg. Martha Stewart."

"They don't have these propane things?"

"Nope. And you have TWO. You run out of the stuff in one, you still have another. And you just call the propane dealer. He comes and fills you up."

"I don't see any telephone wires," the man said.

"Everyone uses cell phones nowadays," the broker said. "No need for them."

"Then what about electric wires?"

"The house is completely self-contained. You have your own gas-driven generator over on the other side of the house for electricity. You fill up a gas container at a gas station. Pour it in, start it up. Maybe a little noisy. But you get used to it. Gas generators are all the rage this season. Self-reliance is the thing. Electric lines are out. Gas and propane are in. Let's go inside."

"Okay."

The broker led them around the house, from where the propane tanks and generator were, back to the front door. There were a dozen keys on the key ring. He started trying to fit them in the front door lock, one at a time.

"I hope you brought the right key," the woman said. "This house really is very charming."

"I'm sure I did," the broker said trying another.

"How far are we from the ocean here?" the man asked.

"Just six miles," the broker said. "Far enough away so the crashing of the surf won't keep you up at night, which is a problem for many people who live nearer the ocean."

"I thought the Hamptons were right on the ocean."

"Well, some of them are. But they are going out of fashion now, what with the noise and all. Also there is the salt air. Rusts cars. Jerry Seinfeld had to take his whole antique Porsche collection out of the Hamptons because of rust. This area here, people are rushing to move into now. It's gentrification. All the prices are going up."

"How do you know this stuff?" the woman asked.

"Oh, I know a lot of Hamptons history. All us folk who work here do." He was still fiddling with the keys. "Oh, by the way, you can see the ocean from the roof from here. Just go into town, buy a ladder, climb up to the roof. It's quite a view."

"I'll bet it is," the man said.

"Ah, here we go," the broker said, pushing open the door. They found themselves inside a tiny, dark living room.

"Smells kind of musty," the man said.

"Some of the furniture is from that TV anchor Howard K. Smith who rented here last summer."

"I thought you said it was Will Smith?"

"It was one of the Smiths. I said that."

"Look at this lovely kitchen," the woman said, walking into it. "What a beautiful old stove. And the refrigerator. I don't think they've made refrigerators like this since the 1930s."

"It's actually an ice box," the broker said. "Here, let me show you the bedrooms."

Between the tiny living room and the kitchen was a hallway with three doors off it. They went into the left doorway.

"This is the master bedroom," the broker said. "See? It has one big bed. Big enough for the both of you."

"It sort of takes up the whole room," the man said.

"Well, back when this house was built," the broker said, "they had smaller rooms because the people were smaller."

"This is THAT old?"

Hostages To Terror

350 Ferry Passengers Detained 3 Hours As Bomb Squad Removes Package From Plum Island Facility

By Dan Rattiner

The big ferry that goes from New London, Connecticut, to Orient Point, Long Island, generally takes an hour and fifteen minutes. Last Sunday night, the ferry that left New London at 6 p.m. did not get its passengers out of Orient Point until nearly four and a half-hours later. It was a frightening experience for those on board the John H., the largest of the ships in the New London ferry fleet. And among the 350 people on board was this reporter. Also delayed for more than three hours were the 80 passengers aboard the high-speed, passenger-only ferry that goes from New London to Orient in just fifty minutes.

As it happened, among the 120 vehicles aboard the John H., this reporter's Lincoln Navigator sat right in front, the very first car loaded and, presumably, the very first car off. From this perspective, front and center, after a peaceful crossing, I got a remarkable look at exactly what happened when we pulled into the slip at Orient Point at 7:15. The workers lowered the barrier and the chain, which extends all the way across, was unfastened. The first of about fifty passengers on foot began to walk past the unfastened chain and up the broad gangplank toward the dock. They got about ten feet, at which time one of the workmen got a call on his walkie talkie, spoke to another workman, who then rounded them up, and gently told them they would have to be returning to the ship for a moment, there was a delay. The chain was re-attached.

As for me, I had been upstairs in the bar talking to some people about the Nets-Celtics playoff game that was going on at that time and ought to have been on the TV at the bar but wasn't. We were told the TV cable was down. Paul Klein, to whom I was talking, periodically used his cell phone to call a friend up the island who was watching the game. When the call came over the loudspeaker to report to our cars, it was the beginning of the third quarter and the Nets were up by ten.

At first, we thought this was just a short delay. But after five minutes, and then ten minutes, nothing happened. There were people on the dock, waiting to greet some of the arrivers. They just stood there and stared. So did the workmen. It was a police matter, was all they were able to tell us. No, they did not know what it was about.

After about fifteen minutes, the captain of the John H. came over the loudspeaker to announce that very fact. He had no information as to how long the delay would be. We would stay on the boat.

Time passed. People came down front to talk to the workmen who could offer no more than they had already said. One man who came over was in full camouflage. A civilian with an Australian floppy hat. Apparently a hunter.

"What's going on?" he grinned. "Whoooa." There was liquor on his breath. "I don't know what is going on." Great. A man with a rifle nearby, with liquor on his breath, who would shortly drive a car.

Sitting in my Navigator I took out my own cell phone and tried to find out what was happening. My first call was to the Southold Police who said it was a police matter and they could tell me nothing except that we had to stay on the boat. I then called the East Hampton Town Police because I am from that town and know them and they said they hadn't any idea about any of this.

Service was very intermittent on the cell phone in the car at the front of the boat. I lost the police twice and had to call back. Now I got out of the car and went up the stairs to higher ground inside the boat. There was talk in the bar that perhaps the police wanted somebody who was on the boat. Maybe this was about drugs. Or a robbery. Or a murder. A man said he'd heard there was an accident on Route 25, which is the only road down the peninsula from the ferry, and the whole thing got blocked off. (A testament to how impossible it would be to evacuate eastern Long Island in an emergency.) As cell phone service was still intermittent, I went up to the outdoor deck on the roof of the boat and from here immediately saw half a dozen police cars, their lights flashing, parked directly on Route 25 in front of the Plum Island Ferry Terminal, which is to the west and directly adjacent to the ferry dock we were at. Ferries from here take scientists and technicians to Plum Island every day. Whatever was going on at that terminal was not good. And the police cars were blocking our ability to pass in front of the Disease Center ferry building.

Plum Island, five miles off Orient, was taken over by the Disease Center in 1948. Since that time, it has been completely off-limits to anyone without both a pass and a complete fumigation, coming and going. This was really not good at all.

High up on this upper deck of the ferry, however, there was better cell phone reception. I called home. I would be late. Cat told me maybe some deadly virus had gotten loose. I should stay indoors and try not to breathe the outside air. This could be serious.

I thought her advice was good, though probably too late, and besides where do you go on a ferry boat that is indoors? It is all outdoor decks and big cabins with open windows and doors. It was far, far too late.

A small boat, one that could probably handle about a dozen passengers, now sailed into the protected harbor out front of the Disease Center. A man got out and walked over to the ferry building. He did not seem concerned.

There was a lot of concern on the John H, and also on the Sea Jet 1, a high speed catamaran that now pulled into the space next to us. Also owned by the New London Ferry, this boat takes no cars and is basically used to transport people up to New London, to waiting busses that take them to the casino, Foxwoods. Now here, at 7:45, there were arriving, about eighty passengers, tired and happy and maybe a little tipsy, waiting to go to their cars parked in the lots at Orient. They were not being allowed to leave their boat, either. We talked to them as if from one neighbor to another.

"Maybe they're transporting a sick sheep," somebody said.

"Maybe it's nuclear waste," said another.

There was conversation about the air we were inhaling. More conversation about the possibility of a terrorist attack on the Plum Island Terminal. What if a bomb went off?

Whose Breasts?

Dramatic Conclusion To The Struggle To Control Two Breasts In Penthouse

By Dan Rattiner

There was a hearing in a Manhattan courtroom the other day about whether all copies of the current issue of a major national magazine should be pulled off newsstands. As a newspaperman and defender of the Constitution's First Amendment, this hearing was of some interest to me. The hearing was held in the Manhattan federal courtroom of Judge Denny Chin, who at one point, held up a copy of the magazine and the article in it that is causing all the furor, and said "Tell me why this should be protected by the First Amendment?" It was a serious question, one he is required to ask. He did not get a very good answer.

The sequence of events that have led to this hearing started on the balcony of a hotel overlooking the beach in Miami Beach five years ago. I wrote about it last week. Call that Part One. Call this Part Two. A woman named Judith Soltesz, sitting on the balcony where everybody could see her, took off the top of her bathing suit to get some sun on her breasts so she wouldn't have strap marks. A woman going around topless in a public place is against the law in some cities and towns in the United States, but not in Miami Beach.

For this reason, it is perfectly legal for a man, say a salesman in a jewelry store in St. Louis named Frank Ramaesiri, to take out a video camera and take pictures of her.

Was it legal for him to take pictures of her topless in a public place and then sell them to a magazine? Yes sir. Anything you see in a public place you have a right to take a picture of, then sell that picture. Doing so is a part of the First Amendment. If this were not the case, there would be no art.

> "After more than thirty years of looking at women... I have developed the ability to accurately see exactly what a woman looks like under her clothes."

The problem here is that the magazine which the jewelry store salesman sold the pictures to identified them upon publication as those of tennis star Anna Kournikova. So here, legally, is where it gets complicated. And where a $10 million lawsuit filed by Judith Soltesz, now Judith Soltesz-Benetton, for embarrassment and humiliation, seems to be getting very ridiculous.

If you do take off your top in a public place and someone mistakenly identifies you as the stunning Anna Kournikova, wouldn't you consider it a compliment?

Anyway, besides these complicated legal issues, the two days of testimony by various individuals about whether the magazine, Penthouse, ought to pull all 1.2 million copies off the stands, an act that could very well bankrupt it, seems almost bizarre.

First of all, there was the testimony of Frank Ramaesiri, the mad videotaper, who said he had a hobby of videotaping women with their tops off in public when he went on vacation. After videotaping this topless woman, he said, he called his mother. Ramaesiri is 47.

"I got Anna Kournikova on tape!" he shouted over his cell phone.

KEEP THE CIRCUS COMING TO SOUTHAMPTON

By Dan Rattiner

For four years now, a small but very loud group of people have demonstrated at the circus when it comes to town. It's been coming here once a year for twenty-five years, to the fair grounds on the Elks Property in Southampton and at least two generations of children have enjoyed the proceedings — acrobats, jugglers, trained ponies, dogs, lions and tigers and elephants and clowns. Before that, other circuses have been coming to one or another village in the Hamptons for at least a hundred years.

Now, actually this coming Tuesday, the Town of Southampton seems ready to issue a permit for "one final time" for the circus to come here. The town officials are tired of the demonstrations, the shouting and yelling in the meeting rooms, the chanting and sign waving and so forth. And so this summer, the Clyde Beatty Circus coming to town for three days will be "it." After that, no more circus. At least in the Hamptons. Unless something changes.

The first time I saw the demonstrators, frankly,

Breasts?

"Maybe you should call the National Enquirer," his mother replied.

Instead he called Penthouse. Everything in the National Enquirer, he believed, was a fake. A cow's head on a dog and so forth. Penthouse magazine said they would buy the pictures if they were real. They would pay him with two tickets to the Super Bowl and a percentage of the increase in the number of Penthouse magazines sold because of this exciting find. Everybody wants to see — scratch that — every Penthouse reading male wants to see Ms. Kournikova with her clothes off.

The judge was curious as to how Ramaesiri knew this was Anna Kournikova.

"The way she had her hair in a pony tail, the way she held her finger out when she held a drink, the way she was manicured," he said. "And also, the size of the nipples. I compared the size of the nipples on my tape to the size of the nipples of a clothed, but very sweaty Anna Kournikova after a tennis match whose nipples you could see through her shirt. They matched exactly."

He also offered the following statement to Judith Soltesz-Benetton, the wife of the heir to the Benetton fortune, who was standing in the courtroom.

"I'm an idiot and I apologize to Ms. Kournikova and Mrs. Benetton," he said. "I'm very sorry, I'm not used to making mistakes. As a matter of fact, I was certain these were pictures of Anna Kournikova right up until I came into this courtroom and saw Mrs. Benetton. I thought there was only one Anna Kournikova. Nobody could look like that except Anna Kournikova. If you saw what I saw I'm sure you would agree," he told the judge.

It was not clear to what he was referring. And the judge was not taking it well. Mrs. Benetton was not taking this very well either.

The judge asked Mrs. Benetton why she was suing. She said she felt what he had done was wrong. And she wanted the magazines removed from the stands because she did not want one at some future date to fall into the hands of her children. She has one, now 4, and she is pregnant with a second.

Next called to the stand were Bob Guccione, the longtime founder and publisher of Penthouse, and several other Penthouse executives and writers.

Annette Witherridge, who was hired to write the 2,500 word article that accompanied the pictures of "Anna Kournikova," said she never met Ms. Kournikova, but did interview Mr. Ramaesiri for ten minutes and got the rest of her information about Ms. Kournikova by checking web sites.

Editor Peter Bloch said that because of some poor years the magazine was in a shaky financial position and that the magazine's "fact checker" had been let go. It was Bloch, because he was editor, who was the one asked why this should be protected by the First Amendment and he replied by saying that the New York Post recently ran a paparazzi photograph of a pot-bellied Russell Crowe and that was protected. He also said that the identification of a picture of somebody was the responsibility of founder and publisher Bob Guccione.

The judge called Guccione.

"After more than thirty years of looking at women," Guccione told the judge "I have developed the ability to accurately see exactly what a woman

The Real Stuff

When The Hamptons Isn't All It's Quacked Up To Be It's Just A Small Town

By Dan Rattiner

This coming weekend the "summer season" begins in the Hamptons. There will be cocktail parties and catered dinners at private homes, luncheons and pool parties, tennis and golf, fundraisers, art gallery openings, lectures, galas, plays, speeches by politicians running for office, speeches by experts on foreign policy or the Tang Dynasty, polo matches, waiting lists and lines at all the important restaurants, film premieres and every other imaginable event and activity that the glitterati attend and the paparazzi take their pictures. Elsewhere in this publication you will read of some of these coming events.

I would like to call your attention, however, to an event I have just learned about here at Dan's Papers that is sort of outside the mold. The announcement of it came in a fax from its promoters to us here at Dan's Papers. Here it is.

BIG DUCK QUACK OFF SET FOR JUNE, it reads. "Gaffney invites all Big Duck fans to `Give it their Best Quack.'"

The Big Duck, if you are unaware of it, is a giant, hollow, white statue of a duck that was built by a farmer some years ago as a place where motorists could pull off the road, walk inside — it is twenty-feet tall —and buy eggs, fresh chickens and ducks and other farm produce. It was built out of cement poured over chicken wire attached to a huge wooden armature. It has Ford Model T headlights for eyes, with red bulbs in them that glow at night. It is painted white. Indeed, the Big Duck is located in the "fabulous Hamptons," in Southampton on Route 24 in Flanders, to be precise, and it is now listed on the National Register of Historic Places. For the past ten years, it has been owned by Suffolk County, which explains why County Executive Bill Gaffney is issuing you the invitation.

A low-powered AM radio station inside the duck ran a continous tape of model Christie Brinkley, talking... as if she were the duck...

If you would like a celebrity connection for the Big Duck just so you feel a little more comfortable about it, you should know that for a period of one year, some time ago, a low-powered AM radio station inside the duck ran a continuous tape of model Christie Brinkley talking lovingly and friendly, as if she were the duck, about its history and why you ought to stop there. The AM station was audible from a mile away and signs a mile from the Big Duck along Route 24 directed you to adjust your radio dial to the frequency to hear her. It.

Anyway, on Saturday, June 1, beginning at 11 a.m., everyone is welcome to come and register at a table in front of the duck to participate in a contest to determine who can make the best quacking-like-a-duck noise.

And there will be festivities. These will include a display of vintage cars, pony rides, children's games, a performance by the Riverhead Middle School Choir and another performance by Jeannie and the Party Lights Band. Also, during the contest, the Big Duck Store inside the duck will be open so participants and spectators can purchase gifts that the writer of this press release describes as "eggstremely unique."

The Big Duck, owned by Suffolk County, is operated by the Friends for Long Island's Heritage. To get to the duck, have your chauffeur take you from your oceanfront home, up to the Montauk Highway in Southampton, then across to County Road 39 where you would turn left, go to the Sunrise Highway and continue on three miles to an exit reading RIVERHEAD-HAMPTON BAYS. Here you bear to the right which puts you on Route 24 heading north. After 3 miles, start listening for the quacking and looking for Big Duck.

They Stole My Idea

State University Scientist Attaches Wires To A Rat And Controls Where It Goes

By Dan Rattiner

Last week, scientists at M.I.T. announced they can type commands into a computer keyboard and get a rat to climb a tree, turn left, turn right and go through a maze. The rat wears a backpack with an antenna on the top and wires that are implanted into its brain. The technician types "J" for a left turn, "L" for a right turn, and "K" to stimulate the reward center. These are the same letters you type for these actions in computer games.

The scientist who has developed this, and who showed it to the press last week, is Dr. John K. Chapin, a professor at the State University of New York's Downstate Medical Center in Brooklyn. The letter J makes the rat think something is brushing up against his left whiskers, the letter L makes him think something is brushing up against his right whiskers, and the letter K makes him feel pleasure and happiness for a few seconds. The rat was quickly trained.

According to Dr. Chapin, rats wearing these backpacks could be very useful in rescue situations, getting into small spaces, sending signals back with tiny global positioning devices and more signals back with tiny video cameras so the scientist at the keyboard can see what is going on. The system works from as far away as 550 feet.

Chapin imagined many rats, extending out for a mile or so, the furthest one sending signals to the next to furthest and so forth and so on. He said rats with backpacks could be useful in crossing military battlefields laced with landmines. But perhaps the most successful demonstration Chapin gave was showing a rat climbing a tree on command. He illustrated his point with a small remote-controlled robot next to the tree, moving around on command. Could a robot climb a tree? No. This was a whole new level of remote control.

Personally, I am outraged about all this, not because I think it is immoral or unethical or cruel to the rats, but because Dr. Chapin has stolen my idea.

I have been working on this very same remote-controlled stimulation backpack for six months. I have prototypes. I am using them on my teenagers. I have three of them, ages 19, 18 and 17. I strap them on and off they go.

"Take out the garbage," I say. They take out the garbage.

"Clean your room," I say. They clean their rooms.

"Do your homework." They do their homework.

The only two differences between Dr. Chapin's work and my work is that Dr. Chapin's backpack is smaller, and that my backpack has a wire into their pain center, not their pleasure center.

"Take the garbage out."

"No."

"Now take the garbage out."

"Ooww. Okay."

"Where are you going?"

"Out."

"Where 'out'?"

"Owww. To Richard's house. Owwww. We are making a video. Owww."

"When will you be back?"

"Owww. Nine o'clock."

I'm calling my lawyer. I don't consider the stealing of scientific research a small matter. And I wouldn't care if he worked at Cal Tech or M.I.T. One of my teenagers is going to serve him some papers. •

I have been working on this very same remote-controlled stimulation backpack for six months. I have prototypes. I am using them on my teenagers.

YOU CAN TELL A LOT ABOUT A STORE BY HOW FAR THEY WON'T GO TO BRING YOU FRESH PRODUCE.

WE TRY NOT TO GO MORE THAN 15 MILES.

It doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure out that asparagus from around the corner is going to taste a whole lot better than asparagus that's been on the road for 100 miles or more. (And in Friday traffic no less.) You can be sure that if locally grown produce is in season, Schmidt's of East Hampton carries it. In fact, if the weather cooperates, our spring asparagus and delicate baby lettuce should be in the store by the time this paper hits the stands.

CHECK OUT THE LOCAL TALENT

We know more than just local produce. Schmidt's of East Hampton is a mecca for delectable local baked goods, mouth-watering chocolates, and sauces and condiments you won't find anywhere else. Even the local chickens are talented, providing us with the best organic eggs we've ever tasted. We've also got some of the best local talent working right here at the store. Our new chef's catering is winning rave reviews, our deli is incredibly popular, and the butcher is considered the very best on the East End. This may also have something to do with the fact that the owners Nina and George, are here every day making sure everything's perfect.

FRESH COFFEE AND JUICY GOSSIP

We serve over 5000 cups of coffee a week, so you have to figure we're doing something right. (And word around town is you can get quite an earful while you're filling your cup.) So, please come in. You'll see that even though we don't go very far for our produce, we go the extra mile for you.

Schmidt's of East Hampton is located at 36 Race Lane across from the Laundry Restaurant. We're open 364 days a year. Our summer hours are 6:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday-Thursday, until 8 p.m.Friday and Saturday and 6 p.m. on Sunday. We deliver. Talk to us about catering your next party. 329-7000.

British Dig In

Colonials Fail To Drive British Redcoats From Sag Harbor In Dramatic Turnabout

By Joshua May

SAG HARBOR, Long Island, May 19 — Driving rain and high winds prevented the launch of whaleboats that would have carried American troops to Sag Harbor to re-enact a Revolutionary War battle, Meigs Raid. Because the Americans never arrived the British Redcoats, history buffs in full military gear, were never challenged for control of the village, which they had lost in 1777, so this year they were victorious. As a result, a sizeable British force patrolled the streets of the village Saturday in an eerie reminder of Sag Harbor life 225 years ago.

"We didn't consider the possibility of bad weather forcing the cancellation of the raid," said Mayor Lauren Fortmiller from her undisclosed basement hiding spot. "The possibility of the Redcoats refusing to end the occupation was never even considered."

This was a glaring oversight, and it has village residents furious that the mayor, LIPA officials and Bridgehampton Bank officials who sponsored the re-enactment could have invited a band of hostile Redcoats to enter the village in 2002 to commemorate the historic raid without planning for this.

"What did they expect?" screeched Sag Harbor resident Margie Bower. "The Redcoats have been angry about the surprise attack for 225 years. And now the mayor and the fat cats at LIPA and Bridgehampton Bank invite them — INVITE THEM — back to the village. It's insane. I've lost all faith in the leadership of this village."

It was clear that the Redcoats still harbored ill will towards the Americans. They brazenly marched up and down Main Street playing fifes and drums, raiding local drinking establishments and accosting citizens in the streets. "It was abominable. No one feels comfortable sitting down for a pint," said one bar owner, who said business was off and he was worried the occupation might continue through the summer. "If it does, my business will be in real trouble," he said. Similar sentiments were expressed by other village business owners. The American Hotel was particularly hard hit. Redcoats came in and removed anything with the word American on it. Owner Ted Conklin puts his losses in the thousands of pounds.

Southampton Town Councilman Dennis Suskind was furious when the news of the failed American victory reached him. He demanded an immediate call to arms. "We drubbed the English 225 years ago and we'll do it again," he said, urging all able-bodied men in Southampton Town to meet at the town green with their muskets, plenty of gunpowder and their SUVs.

> Suskind was furious when the news of the failed American victory reached him. He demanded an immediate call to arms. "We drubbed the English 225 years ago and we'll do it again."

Thomas Fabiano, formerly the Sag Harbor chief of police, was named General of the Southampton Militia and he gravely assessed the situation. "They didn't know we were coming the last time and they'll be ready for us this time. It will be a bloody battle but we will be victorious," he said confidently.

The element of surprise was firmly in the hands of the Colonials when they commenced an attack on British forces stationed in Sag Harbor on May 23, 1777. Departing from Connecticut in whaleboats, a regiment of the Continental Army lead by Lt. Jonathan Meigs rowed across Long Island Sound, carried their boats across the North Fork and then rowed to Long Beach. Under the cover of darkness they entered Sag Harbor, which had become a British fort after Colonial forces had been driven from the island, raided the fort and captured the Redcoats stationed there. Only a few shots were fired, twelve enemy ships were burned and not a single American life was lost. Twenty-five hours after the attack began the Colonials returned to Connecticut victorious.

Now, 225 years and one week later, General Fabiano has proposed a brash frontal assault on the Redcoats at their encampment at the Customs House. The first casualty of the occupation was also reported by a spy who said that Jim Masters, a fifteen-year-old from Quogue, was cracked in the head with a musket by a Redcoat after making fun of his "stupid hat." Village officials fear more reprisals against teenagers who feel the need to express their opinions about the Redcoats' fashion choices.

The occupation is further complicated by Loyalist sympathizers who have been harboring and supporting the Redcoats. Reports have been confirmed by a number of sources that Dave, the bartender at the Corner Bar and a Brit by birth, was serving Redcoats burgers and beers. Suspicious activity has also been reported at village dental offices and, in an unsigned letter, one village dentist stated that "this occupation could be a windfall for those in the dental profession. The state of British dental care is well known and, as the Hippocratic Oath states, it is our duty to treat anyone suffering from tooth decay or gum disease." East End residents were disgusted when the letter was leaked to the press and Bob Baugh, owner of the Sagg Main Store in Sagaponack, said, "It sounds more like the hypocrisy oath than the Hippocratic Oath."

Speaking from Buckingham Palace in London Queen Elizabeth applauded the Redcoat efforts and was reported to be in a cheerful mood. "Those uppity Colonials are finally getting what they deserve," she was overheard saying to Prince Charles. With the support of the royal crown, rumors are circulating that the British Navy is preparing to transport troops and supplies. The occupation of Sag Harbor may mean a long, long summer. •

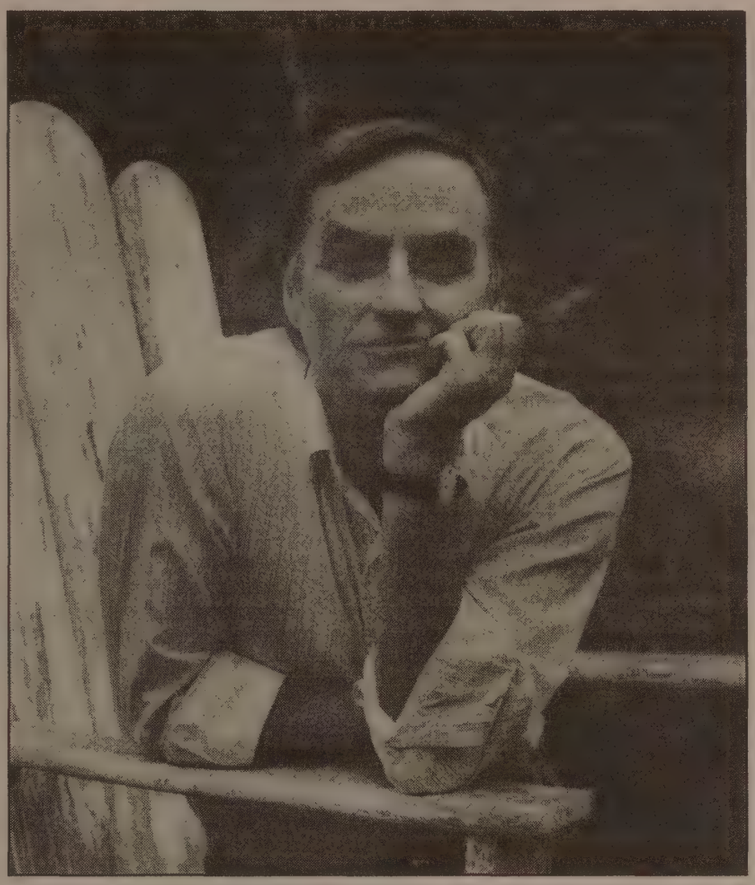
Who's Here:



Landford Wilson

Playwright

By Nick de Sève

"I was a teacher at Southampton College for one semester — I didn't prepare! Teachers have to prepare... I didn't know it! My students came in, a huge class, summer term, and I told them everything I knew about playwriting in the first twenty minutes and there was still another hour and a half to go! And I thought, 'You are up the creek here'... you know, that moment you realize looking out over the class that you are in deep yogurt!" —Ex-teacher and Pulitzer Prize winner Lanford Wilson

Who would be the "quintessential" American playwright? How would we bestow such a title — what would our criteria be? You might start by defining what the word "American" had actually come to mean during the latter half of the twentieth century.

Could our nominee comfortably explore the uniquely "American" angst of troubled teens in a dead-end Southern California community? Would the same playwright be at home delineating the sorrows, sly humor and inbred pluck of would-be landed gentry on a backwater Missouri plantation? How about the desperate world of addicts and hookers, denizens of the Upper West Side's notorious "Needle Park," or the bitterness of failed Ivy League intellectuals, refugees from academia and blighted dreams?

Lanford Wilson knows the diverse music of all those American voices — discordant, sweet, arrogant, hysterically funny, angry and regretful — and he has used his mind-boggling range of experience and memory to tremendous advantage in a professional canon that spans forty years.

Pulitzer Prize and New York Drama Critics Circle Award winner for Talley's Folly (1980), a brace of Obies awarded for Hot L Baltimore (1973) and The Mound Builders (1975), Best Play, American Theater Critics Association Award for Book of Days (2001), these are only a few of the kudos for a few of his plays. The fact of his writing is that in any one of his works — over sixty full length and one act plays — the theatergoer is bound to be jolted by the recognition of a shared kinship, for better or worse, with some character upon Wilson's stage. The Bay Street Theater, in his adopted home of Sag Harbor, is presently adding the final touches to its upcoming revival of Talley's Folly (running from May 21 through June 9).

On a relatively frigid and crystalline April afternoon, the playwright invites me into his beautiful, 150 year-old-perpetually-restored-gray-shingled-landmark-house in the middle of a neighborhood of landmark houses, on a gentle hill in the heart of Sag Harbor. Dressed in salmon drawstring pants, a light fisherman's pullover and his trademark white sweat socks (no shoes), it's quite evident that he does not stand on, or require, formality. A couple of young houseguests gleefully flip burgers in his kitchen, and one gets the impression that a houseful of weekend invaders, left to their own devices, is not an uncommon occurrence in his airy and warm cottage.

The bios all list 1937 as the date of birth (in Lebanon, Missouri, the scene of the Talley family trilogy among others of his works), but that date doesn't jibe with the reed-slim man of average height sitting across the dining room table. A soft and rolling heartland baritone, pale blue eyes in a boyishly handsome face (despite the unkempt five days salt and pepper growth), put me in mind of a latter day Montgomery Clift, replete with all the obvious grace and attendant vulnerability, but possessed of a lot more resiliency and a knowing, self-deprecating sense of humor.

Wilson knows the diverse music of all those voices — discordant, sweet, arrogant, hysterically funny, angry and regretful...

In between his impromptu tours of the house with its sunlit second-floor writer's studio, and the terraced gardens that he labors in from March to October, he generously shared many aspects of his public and private personas. Always animated, sharply attuned to the different emotions evoked by his anecdotes, the great writer proves to be an accomplished storyteller as well. Chain-smoking Camels throughout ("I've been smoking since I was nine... I mean people in the Midwest smoke like crazy, somebody's got to do it or else the whole state of North Carolina would go under."), he assures me that his glass of vanilla Ensure suffices for lunch: "You know, 'Only 250 calories and all the vitamins you need!' I drink this stuff because I don't have any appetite in the morning. I don't have an appetite for lunch till about eight o'clock at night!"

He bought the Sag Harbor house (originally built for a sea captain) in '72, the result of an immediate infatuation with the East End: "I had already lived in Manhattan for seven years before I came out here for a weekend to a friend's place on North Haven, and we just started wandering through the woods up there, you know, recognizing all the trees from my childhood — because I grew up on a farm near a small town — and just having a great time. Anyway, later, I found Sag Harbor, fell in love with the place, rented a cottage, bought a bike and just rode all over town. One day I'm sitting in the antique store and the lady says 'Lanford, you love this town so much why don't you just buy a house. There's one went on the market just yesterday,' and she described this house that I had already seen on my travels (at five in the morning), and I had thought 'My God, someone oughta buy this place and fix it up, it's just pathetic what they're doing to that gorgeous house.' And I walked all the way back past the front of the house... dogs started barking like crazy, so I thought 'maybe not!' But you know, it was fate, I mean she pointed out the same house that I had already decided I should buy."

How has he dealt with Sag Harbor's explosion in popularity over the past few years?

"Well, it's changed a lot, it really has. I'm probably the only person who thinks it's changed for the better. They're saving so many of the houses. At least half of the houses in town have been completely restored since I've been out here. This place had a collapsed deck, two cars up on blocks, the shack in the rear had completely fallen in and an outhouse with junk piled in it... but architecturally, it's as strong as a rock. I have nothing but horror, however, for what's happening outside the town limits, they're building these huge things and right on top of each other. I mean the houses in Sag Harbor are right on top of each other, but there was a reason for it, not just building everywhere higgledy-piggledy."

Since he has written plays that have taken place almost everywhere else around the country, was there a possible story line about the East End in the making?

"I thought about writing about the restoration of this house. Actually, the Fifth of July was originally going to take place in the Hamptons, and then I decided that what I was really talking about, recovering from the Vietnam War, really belonged in the center of America rather than out in the Hamptons, but the garden that Jed (a character in Fifth) was building came right from my own experience gardening out here. I made him a lot more competent than I! I used to help my grandmother in her garden back in Lebanon, I'm not particularly good at it."

He has been referred to as "the last populist" in American theater and compared in some regards to the likes of Tennessee Williams, Lillian Hellman and William Inge among others. Did he agree with either assessment?

"I don't know what "populist" means. I'm going to have to look it up in the dictionary. The strongest influence on me was Dickens. It's only in that I keep thinking that I write such mundane damned people and stories — you know the way we like to put ourselves through hoops — and when I read him, his characters are so out there, so outrageous, just short of caricatures and I hope he pushes me to be a little bit more out there, a little more strange. Tennessee was certainly an influence."

How different is it for a playwright today, as opposed to when he first came to prominence in the early sixties?

"There are so many theaters now, there are so many groups. Back then, in the sixties, there were two. There was La Mama and Café Cino. There were maybe a total of four theaters in New York City where you could walk into unannounced and say, 'Look, here's my script.' There are so many shows today that I've never seen, so many places that I've never heard of."

Why are you uninterested?

"No, I'm in Sag Harbor! One of the things that I hate about my position right now is that I'm a Tony voter. I'm fairly conscientious about that, and although I don't really like much of what's on Broadway, I live out here so that when I go to New York now, I have to see Broadway shows to catch up on the Tonys, and I end up not seeing a lot of the really interesting smaller stuff."

Wilson was less than sanguine about his past dealings with Hollywood.

"Well, I've had a bad experience or two. Hallmark bought Redwood Curtain (his 1992 Broadway play about traumatized Vietnam vets) and they wanted someone else to write the screenplay. And I said 'Why,' and they said, 'Well, we want someone different to do it.' Basically, they wanted someone who could take dictation. They got a director who would rewrite every single scene the night before it was shot, and the actors would have to learn everything all over again. Finally, Jeff Daniels blew up at him. The director just destroyed that play; he just pissed on it. It was one of the most embarrassing things to happen to me. Oh, I mean he made it just sentimental horseshit! At the end of the play, the vet (Daniel's character) is standing in the doorway of the house listening to the music, he takes two steps into the house and he sits down in the chair (at this point, Wilson is so involved in the recollection that he actually sobs)... Oh, it's just so moving for me, I just love that moment as the curtain comes down, it's so gorgeous. Oh, fuck me. It's just one of the worst pieces of crap ever done on television and that's saying a lot."

One of Wilson's personal favorites is his play Angels Fall (1982). Despite his efforts to extend its Broadway run, the show closed after a few months. How does he deal with a perceived "failure," despite his long track record of solid commercial and critical hits?

Who's Here:

Justin and Lauren Kulchinsky

Jewelers

By Dan Rattiner

I had an opportunity this winter to sit with Justin and Lauren Kulchinsky whose family owns and runs Mayfair Jewelers in East Hampton, and a new store opening in Southampton. Lauren is a stunningly, beautiful young woman of thirty-one, whose had a career as an actress, a model, a stand-in, even a stunt double for various films and TV shows, including the Sopranos, New York Undercover and the movies The Juror and One True Thing, where she doubled for Demi Moore and Renee Zelwiger. Today, she's off on a new career with her brother, which is running the store. Actually it's an old career since she, her brother and other siblings, Mom and Dad and the two founders of Mayfair Jewelers, their grandparents, all live together in a summer home out in Montauk during the season. But if Lauren has had an interesting career prior to settling down in the jewelry business, so has Justin.

Justin at twenty-eight, is as handsome as Lauren is beautiful, he has been a highly successful tri-athlete for the last ten years. He was at the National Championships in Cancun for Team USA in 1994 and went to Israel for the Maccabiah Games as part of Team USA in 1995. A knee injury sidelined him from a further career as an amateur or a professional athlete, but as you could see these are extraordinary lives with extraordinary accomplishments for people so young. They are people with a can-do attitude for whatever business they go into.

Lauren traced the history of this extraordinary family for me. About 1900 their great-grandparents left Kiev in Russia to escape the Pogroms going on there at that time. The family went to France and then to Argentina and then eventually Schmuel. Their late great-grandfather went to Manhattan and settled on Canal Street where he started in the wholesale jewelry business. Schmuel's son Seymour, also in the jewelry business, moved with his wife Shirley and children out of Manhattan in the late 1950s to Commack, Long Island. Their house accommodated all Seymour's children including their son Daniel and it was here in 1958 that Seymour and Shirley founded Mayfair Jewelers, still there today and known as Mayfair Diamonds and Fine Jewelry.

"We are one of 120 couture jewelers in the country and sell designers who are exclusive to Mayfair from Italy, Great Britain, Germany and the United States."

Dan came into the business in 1968 and brought it to a new level, with the same focus on family. Dan, his wife Joan, along with his four children, Justin, Lauren, Kristen, who is a jewelers apprentice in England and Ryan, who is a musician and is signed to Maverick Records, have lived in Montauk for the last twenty summers. I asked Lauren to tell me more about the movie and film business that she had been in.

"I went to the Lee Strassberg Theatre Institute. I started in off-Broadway productions and commercials. I was on New York Undercover for four years playing Detective Bronsky. I was a double on the Sopranos for two seasons, filling in for any female on the show. I was a stand-in for Lorraine Bracco and as I mentioned earlier I was a double for Demi Moore. I started to do more jewelry placement on the shows and was able to mesh the two loves together. Finally, the jewelry turned into the main passion and I no longer perform but I still dress many actresses for awards and personal appearances. We are one of 120 couture jewelers in the country and sell designers who are exclusive to Mayfair from Italy, Great Britain, Germany and the United States. We get very involved with our clients. We have been to the designers' Ateliers and we have seen the jewelry made. So being involved with the jewelry from the beginning makes the finished product even more important to find good homes for."

Justin told me a bit more about his career as an athlete. "Making Team USA, I really imagined that I was going to be a professional athlete all my life," he said. "You know, live in a van, make fifty dollars a week, driving around from event to event." Justin got a B.A. from Stony Brook in philosophy. "Almost every weekend there's one of our designers at our house from Italy or the U.K. Their designs range from simple elegance to Glam Rock," he said. "Everything is selected by me, my sister, my Mom and my Dad and one of us is always in the store. We get very involved with our clients."

I asked how they had come out to the Hamptons for the first time. "My parents decided to buy a place in Montauk to spend the summers with us. Some kids went to sleep away camp, we went to Camp Montauk." The branch of Mayfair Jewelers was opened three years ago in East Hampton.

I asked about their other siblings, Kristen and Ryan. Kristen, the younger sister is in London studying at Guild Hall University and apprenticing and modeling for jewelry designer Stephan Webster. Brother Ryan went to Stony Brook University and performs in a band called Stage. Their first album is due out in July, 2002. A world-class athlete, TV and movie actress, musician and jewelers apprentice, Dan's children are well positioned to continue and expand the jewelry business legacy which has been in their family since 1923. •

CALVIN TRILLIN: SOUTHAMPTON COLLEGE 35TH COMMENCEMENT

By Lise Visser

Southampton College's 35th Commencement benefited from what was possibly the most pleasurable weather ever experienced for the proceedings. Clear blue skies were dotted by the occasional curious gull overhead, with scant wisps of clouds. Brilliant sunshine highlighted flowers, balloons and smiles below.

At the outset of the program, a moment of silence was observed in remembrance of those who perished on September 11. Then the crowd was accompanied in the singing of "America the Beautiful" by The Suffolk Brass, Bob Walker and Chris Coffill on trumpets, Joe Pergola on trombone, Lynn Borrmann on French horn and Mike Coraro on baritone tuba.

Humorist Calvin Trillin addressed the appreciative assembly after receiving an honorary Doctor of Letters, presented by Roger Rosenblatt, the University Professor in Writing. In awarding the honor, Professor Rosenblatt described Trillin as "a chronicler of all that is sublimely ridiculous in American life and he has shown that the way to a nation's heart is through its belly laugh. Reared on Kansas City leftovers, basted at Yale, you set up shop in New York where you pricked the pompous and ignobled the worthy. Best of all you made us laugh until we thought."

Dr. Trillin did not disappoint as he noted on the spot observations of the Valedictorian and spoke about his own fellow alumni in mirthful terms. He started out, "You may not have realized it, but the remark on leftovers was literal. I was out of college before I realized that for 20 years my mother had served the family nothing but leftovers, and I started to wonder: leftover from what? So we sent a team of anthropologists there looking for the original meal, which they were never able to find."

After congratulating the other honorees Trillin spotlighted Valedictorian Jason Bruck, saying, "I was very heartened to see Jason up here because sometimes when I meet a kid who's five or six years old and we're starting a conversation I say, 'Tell me, who is the meanest, awfulest, yuckiest kid in your class?' It's sort of an ice breaker and you'd be surprised how often the answer is... Jason! So I'm very gratified to meet a Jason who obviously isn't the meanest, awfulest, yuckiest kid in the class."

Trillin's father wanted him "to be the President of the United States and his fall back position was that I not be a ward of the county. You might say that he had mixed feelings about my potential."

Regarding his memoir Trillin affirms, "I was at a great disadvantage for writing a memoir because I had a pretty happy childhood and to have a good memoir you're supposed to have some hideous secret to tell, a bad drug habit or incest or if you're from a background of particularly rich and literary potential it may be bestiality or something like that. I didn't have any surprises or secrets. The only secret I can think of had to do with a collie dog."

He related the story of the family collie, Chubby, who was somewhat sickly. "At one point my parents came to my sister and me and said 'Chubby is on a farm now, where he'll be happy frolicking with the other animals in the fresh air.' I didn't think much about it after that. Years later Chubby's name came up in conversation. I think I was home from college and I said, 'Why didn't we ever go visit Chubby on the farm?'

"My sister said, 'There wasn't any farm! Chubby had to be put to sleep.'

"I said, 'Chubby's gone?'

"My mother said, 'Well, he'd probably be gone

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander # 201
South Pacific

Last weekend the Shelter Island Players performed South Pacific. I was very worried that because it is a big musical, there might be more cast than audience.

The curtain rose... first off, kudos' to Frank Cirillo for once again creating attractive and functional sets. This year was better than last year because they incorporated real items. Instead of painting a barrel, they put a real barrel on stage. Instead of painting drunken sailors, they had real ones as evidenced by their appearance in grass skirts later in the show. (And kudos to Frank Cirillo's mother. A brilliant and beautiful woman who lives in California and told me she faithfully reads my column and passes it along to friends.)

A quick smack on the side of the head to whomever stapled the programs with the staples so far in, everyone had to either pull the staples out or tear the program to read it. Must have been those drunken sailors.

A big Hey-nonny-nonny-and-a-hot-cha-cha kudo to Melanie Matz, who played the lead female, Nellie Forbush. Melanie is a newcomer to the Island and WOW, what a way to start off! Pretty, thin and talented! A triple threat, I decided to hate her now and avoid the rush! And courage? She appeared in a bathing suit onstage. A real bathing suit and she was really in it with harsh lights and hundreds of eyes focused on her. That only happens to me in my nightmares and in other people's nightmares of me appearing onstage in a bathing suit...

Phil DiOrio, who played Emil deBecque, did a fine job. I understand this was his first time on stage. He done good. But I think throwing Melanie down in the sand and rolling around in the surf was not in the original script... and what pleasure to have people in lead roles in musicals who can actually sing.

The guys did a great job with "Nothin' Like a Dame," but I'm sad to say the gals washed you right outta their hair. The high school girls who played the nurses were all terrific. Stephanie Needham, the ebullient stand out as usual.

Darrin Binder played the part of the loud, boisterous, wheeler dealer Seabee named Billis. Darrin, whom I understand in real life is a soft, gentle soul who labors building pools by day so he can save up to buy a florist shop had to really stretch himself to play a raucous and undisciplined hard drinking, hard lovin' sailor.

I want to go on record right now and say that the sight of stocky, hairy Darrin Binder in a coconut bra and a grass skirt singing "Bali Ha'I" with notes from many other songs, was worth the price of admission twice over. I laughed so hard my cheeks ached.

The most underestimated acting in the show occurred when Adam Hashagen, who played the young, stiff Lt. Cable, was somehow able to maintain a straight face with Darrin in his coconut bra singing "Bali Ha'I" in his best sexy voice two inches from Adam's ear. The audience was screaming with laughter as "Darrin the Merciless" did his absolute level best to break Adam up, but the kid held!

I will take a moment and give honorable mention to Bruce Kaiser, the scene-stealing servant of Emil deBecque who played three other roles as well.

The Hubba-Hubba Award goes to Chris Evangelista, who played Stew Pot. (Pssst, Chris — remember people are watching you even when you have no lines. Also remember, I'm staying in Room #10 at the Chequit and I'm staying there until you turn 18).

David O'Flynn and Jim Wilcenski, two of the best singers on the island, both had non-singing roles as the captain and commander respectively. I got a good laugh when they did scenes in the captain's

Sunesta
East End Awning

HERE'S TO A SQUINT-FREE SUMMER!

Here's to a glorious summer under the shade of a Sunesta awning from East End Awning. It's going to be hot. The sun is going to be strong. Even with sunscreen and sunglasses you'll need extra protection.

Starting our 8th season at East End Awning, we offer a large selection of strong, water-repellent awnings available in over 200 beautiful colors and patterns. Sunesta awnings have no ugly confining braces or upright poles and they retract easily either manually or with the push of a button with an optional motor.

They'll shield you from the brutal sun, provide soothing, cooling shade and beautify your home, all at the same time. (And maybe prevent a few wrinkles, too.)

Call now so we can order and install your awnings before things get really hot! (Installation is free).

office and on the wall, where you might expect to see a map of... oh, I don't know, how about the Pacific Ocean... there was an old style map of the world with the Atlantic in the center and hardly any of the Pacific at all. Obviously there was a social studies classroom missing a map...

David, who was The Music Man last year, gave his usual excellent performance, this time as the bellowing captain. This was David's nineteenth musical.

Jim did an outstanding job as the sycophant commander. I watched carefully and noticed that Jim snapped a perfect salute like he'd done it a thousand times. He also was able to shout orders into Darrin Binder's left ear and make brain tissue fly out of his right ear... I smelled a jarhead... later research confirmed that Jim served in the Marine Corp. I don't think any of the Armed Forces leaves its mark as indelibly on a person's character and psyche as does the United States Marine Corp. Of all the axioms in our culture, the truest one is, "Once a Marine, always a Marine."

Both men had ribbons on their costume/uniforms. I observed after the show there was a Vietnam ribbon, a Purple Heart ribbon and a Bronze Star ribbon. I learned that these belonged to the maternal grandfather of the very talented Chris Cunha who played Emil deBecque's son, Jerome. Chris' grandfather was a bonafide war hero who made the ultimate sacrifice and must have saved many others in the process to warrant a Bronze Star.

Lisa Shaw played Bloody Mary. She was amazing! Chewed up the scenery and blew everyone else off the stage. I've been to Broadway shows and I will tell you sincerely, she could play this role on Broadway, she was THAT good! As George Raft once said of his co-star Mae West, "She stole everything but the camera." Lisa has a business carving the wooden signs that signal a business has "arrived" here on the island. She can give this up at anytime and go professional as an actress. And sing... only the best voice on the stage that night. Whenever the Shelter Island Players want to do Hello Dolly, they've got their Dolly.

Thank you to Director Jennifer Corwin for coordinating all this talent and giving the island the memory of Darrin Binder in a coconut bra and grass skirt. We can hold this against him for years.

I was totally baffled. Nobody is in favor of hurting or harming animals. What do the circus people do that, say the zoo people or the horse show people or even the lady with an apartment on Fifth Avenue do differently in relation to the animals under their control? Not a damn thing.

On Fifth Avenue, for example, dogs are cooped up in a small space all day, fed probably the same dog food prepared at the same unsanitary and unregulated factory every day, get water if the lady remembers to leave it out, gets taken "out" for a walk once or twice a day, or (with certain ladies) taken for a "run" somewhere once or twice a day. The dogs love it. They miss the lady when she is not there. They get put into a box where they can hardly turn around when they go traveling, and if they're not allowed to come, some of them even stay home alone and get walked (gasp) in packs up and down the street by total strangers. It's tough being a dog. And dogs love it. They have a family, people who love them, a den, a home and a routine. All the rest is irrelevant. You'll even find some of them doing "tricks" when the lady's bridge club comes over. The lady's friends oogle over the dog. The dog wags happily.

At the circus, with the prancing horses, the attentive tigers, the hurry up and walk faster elephants and the trained dogs one sees the very same behavior. Here's the relevant sentence again. Animals love having a family, people who love them, a den, a home and a routine.

The thing about a circus, and about a dolphin show, and about Clydesdales proudly pulling a wagon full of kegs of beer, is that the animals are indeed members of a family. Whether they be circus performers, zoo keepers or old ladies on Fifth Avenue, the animals appear, and are, loved, hugged and petted, happier, safer and longer lived than otherwise.

Consider the alternative. Let's set all our beloved animals loose into the wild. Well, we freed Willie from the cruel owners and his cruel handlers at the dolphin show and all he wanted to do was get back. He missed them. Wille, the real Free Willie not the movie Free Willie, was set free in 1993. Tens of millions were spent to return him to the wild. He is currently in a cove in Iceland, still being fed chunks of fish by handlers, but far, far away from demonstrators and people who in my opinion truly wouldn't know a happy whale if they saw one.

Well, what if, finally, all the pets, all the working animals, all the trained animals, all the animals on display are set free? They will either be eaten alive by larger animals or they will eat alive smaller animals. And that is the truth. And have you seen animals in the wild? There's always one of them that's looking nervously over its shoulder.

Yes, there are cruel people at circuses. And there are cruel people on Fifth Avenue and everywhere else. Are there animals that break away and get run over by cars? I think so. Appropriate fines and punishments should be administered.

Take your children to the Town Hall on Tuesday. Let them hear how the elephants are forced to wear harnesses and chains so they don't wander off for awhile. (Are elephants horrified at the idea of wearing a harness and chain? Is it more acceptable, or just a matter of a smaller scale for dogs to wear collars and leashes?) This is a classic in any case,' because collies didn't usually live for 20 years.

"I said, 'Yeah, but why am I just finding out about this now?'

"And my father said, 'It's not our fault you're slow on the uptake!'"

Trillin points this out as an example of some of the "dangers of writing a memoir, which is that there are other people who are witnesses. 'Cause after this appeared my sister called me up and said, 'The dog was not called Chubby. The dog was called George. You were called Chubby.'"

At a time when Trillin was paying for two of his own offspring in college, "The New York Times had a 900 number to give you three answers to the crossword puzzle. I figured about three facts for $1.65 and I used to call. I don't do crossword puzzles but for the tuition I was paying I figured three facts for $1.65 was the sort of bargain I couldn't pass up!"

He said, "The one thing we know about higher education is that there's a payoff but we don't know when it comes and what form it comes in. Higher education has a slow fuse and that's true with public policy as well as individuals. One of the greatest achievements in this country is expanding higher education from the narrow little elite at the beginning of the country to an extraordinarily broad section of the population. So the greatest pieces of public policy enacted were the Land Grant College Act in the nineteenth century that set up the state universities, the GI Bill and Affirmative Action."

He described a longitudinal study done at Harvard in the late '30's called "Adaptation to Life" because everybody in life has detours and setbacks. The researchers decided that the question of actual health and happiness had to do with how you responded to those detours and setbacks. A lot of that has to do with the intellectual resources that you can draw on from your education.

"When I went back to my 25th reunion I did a little study... I decided that income was precisely in inverse proportion to academic standing in the class. What sort of tipped me there was that 25 years out, the lower third of my class were Wall Street millionaires.

"Yes, it is," the broker said. "Now here, in the far door, is the second bedroom, a bit smaller than the master bedroom, and inside it has a single bed, and between the two, in this middle door, very conveniently, the bathroom. It is a very old-fashioned bathroom, just like the kitchen. Take my word for it."

"Does it have a tub with claw feet?" the woman asked.

"No, but it has one of those quaint aluminum stand up shower stalls you bolt together."

"Wouldn't you have thought," the man said, "that over the years they might have upgraded all the fixtures in the house?"

"Well, they DID," the broker said. "But Martha Stewart, when she rented here a few years ago, I think it was Martha Stewart, she insisted that all the modern conveniences be taken out and the entire place restored to how it originally was a hundred years ago. It has started a whole fad. A whole trend."

"I didn't know that," the man said.

"Oh yes. It's going to be right on the front cover of the next issue of Martha Stewart Living the magazine. You'll see. I've gotten the inside scoop on that."

"You know a lot," the man said.

"Oh yes. I know Peter Jennings. Christie Brinkley. Billy Joel. Everybody."

"And we can go to all the parties in the summertime?"

"Of course you can."

"Well, let's step outside for a minute. It's kind of burning my eyes in here. But let me and the wife talk for a minute."

"Of course," the broker said.

The man and woman, out in the tall grass that, when mowed, would be the front lawn, talked out of earshot of the broker. The broker took out his cell phone, dialed a number, cupped his hand over his mouth, and talked quietly to somebody. He said "million" a few times. After awhile, the couple walked over and the broker turned off the cell phone.

"How about we rent just for the month of July?" the man asked.

"I don't think we could do that. It's four-fifty for the season. The owner wants the whole season. For half the season, perhaps he'd take three-ninety."

The man and woman talked quietly again.

"How about just for the Fourth of July weekend?"

"Well, that's the highlight of the whole summer, isn't it? I think I could get the owner to rent it for maybe three hundred and seventy-thousand. You know that's the most exciting time in the Hamptons. Three hundred and seventy. It would be quite a bargain."

The man pointed to the broker's cell phone. "Could you call him?" he asked.

"I'll be right back." The broker walked behind the house. Then, in a minute, he was back. "Three hundred seventy-five thousand," he said, "paid in advance. And you pay for a tank of propane."

"Deal," the man shouted.

"Great," the broker said. "Let's go back to the car. We'll drive back to the office and I'll fill out all the papers."

"Summer in the Hamptons," the woman said. "This is so exciting." •

"They should be taking us back out to sea instead of just leaving us here," someone said. "Take us to Bridgeport."

At the bar on our boat, the passengers had commandeered the TV, pulled out its cable plug, and with the cable out, were able to get a very snowy version of the last quarter of the Nets-Celtics game. The Nets were still up by five. There were three minutes to go. It was a great game and our Nets were winning. I thought I'd died and gone to heaven.

"This is very scary," a woman said.

"Yeah, but I think the Nets are going to win it," somebody replied. That's not, of course, what she had been talking about. Three minutes later, however, the Nets did win it.

The standoff, nobody getting off the boat and nobody getting on, went on for an hour without further explanation. We began to feel like hostages. The next boat from New London, the Cape Henlopen, now arrived behind us with about 70 cars and 200 passengers on board, but it just stayed offshore with no place to dock. You could hear the engines running and all that diesel fuel being used up, on all three boats. Soon we would not have enough fuel to go anywhere.

An hour and a half into the crisis, the captain came over the P.A. system and instructed us to return to our cars because we would be permitted to leave the boat and go about three hundred feet up the dock. But we still would not be allowed off the ferry property. And he had no further information about what the police matter was although, obviously, it was something at the Plum Island Ferry dock. We could all see it.

I went back downstairs, got in my car and we rumbled off. Directly in front of us, lined up in rows, were the 120 cars waiting to get ON the John H. for the 8 p.m. trip back to New London. It was now nearly nine o'clock.

From my car, now parked in the flash of the lights of the half-dozen Southold Town police cars, I tried calling Newsday and Channel 12 News. Neither answered. It was Sunday night. Then I got a brainstorm. I'd call my friend John Roland of Fox News. I tried a city number and a machine answered saying this was the Estee Lauder Company (?) and I should leave a message. I tried his home in Westhampton Beach and got him. It was just after nine. I told him what I knew. He said he would call his people. If either of us learned anything, we would call the other.

An hour later, at ten, we were still there. But we had an explanation. One of the officers standing by a police car could think of no reason why we couldn't know what was going on. And he told us. A man had delivered a package to the Plum Island Ferry building. He had had words with a woman there. When he left, she called the police. The police sealed off the area and called the bomb squad. The bomb squad is located at Islip McArthur Airport an hour and a half away. They were on their way.

We were tired, hungry and thirsty. There were 350 of us. At ten, the John H. issued a long, low moan from its foghorn, inviting all those who were waiting in those rows to go to New London at 8 p.m., to drive on board. They began loading.

"Why can't we get some pizza delivered?" somebody asked. The space blocked off on Route 25 was just a half-mile. "They could park at the far end and just throw them to us like frisbees."

Some people went to the ferry terminal where it was warmer and where there were bathrooms. The only food available had been on the John H. Now the John H. was backing out.

"There goes our food!" someone shouted.

At ten past ten the bomb squad arrived and went inside the Plum Island Ferry terminal. After fifteen minutes, they were seen gingerly taking something out of the terminal and putting it into a white van.

"I'm so disappointed when they (critics) don't get it. I don't know how to feel. When you see something done by someone else and the critic reviews it, and he just nails it... I mean nails everything that's right with it and wrong with it... and then they don't like your work, you think: 'Oh, shit, am I just not seeing it myself, or did they miss this one.' It's like Frank Rich of the Times had been writing very good things about me, he was the only critic that got and loved Redwood Curtain. But he went to see Burn This, and a close friend got the review and brought it to the party at Tavern on the Green and he said, 'Lanford it's terrible, he makes fun of the play.' I started reading it, and I said 'You know I don't want to read this tonight, I don't need that tonight.' Some of the other reviews were much better. It's a damn good play. Anyhow, two years after the play had closed, I ran across the review — I found it in the trunk of my car while I was looking for something else — so I read it, and I was depressed for two days, I couldn't do anything but sit down like this for two days. So, they affect me very deeply but I wish I didn't read them. Maybe I'll stop.

"After Angels Fall, I came out here and sat around for a solid year and finally, Mark Lamos called and said, 'How would you like to do a translation of Three Sisters,' and I thought, 'Thank God I've got something to do!'"

His goal: "What would the play sound like if Chekhov had written it in English?" The only problem: Wilson did not speak or understand a word of Russian. He launches into a very funny anecdote about the crazed, deadline-threatened playwright scrambling to translate, literally, every single word of the original Russian and then fashion an English-friendly version true to the spirit of the Russian original. He crashed-coursed at Berlitz four hours a day, transliterated every sign and ad in Manhattan from one language to another, would only ride in cabs with Russian drivers, and inevitably, needed a couple of nightly drinks in a local bar just to clear his head enough to realize what language he and the other patrons were actually speaking. When the dust had cleared, a year later, his translation received a beautiful and successful production at the Hartford Stage Company.

On a different tack, I wondered if he perceived much of a cultural change in America as the result of the politics of the past thirty years or so:

"No, I don't see much of a change. There have been those groundswells that have promised better times. Dr. King changed things a little bit, but in reality, we get promises and no follow-ups. It's been that way since, I think, Roosevelt. He was the last person who did anything that materially improved life in the country, but things were rock bottom at the time anyway. I'm regretful for the country. We missed it, the promise of the sixties, we missed it completely. There was a real chance for positive social change and instead, today, we get nothing but spin from our leaders."

On September 11:

"About a week after the bombing they asked artists in all sorts of fields: How was this going to affect America, how was it going to affect their discipline, their work, their field, and I read all of them and said, 'That's just amazing that they could articulate anything that quickly because I still can't.' It's the most profound sea change that's happened to us. For me personally it's affected me so deeply... I didn't know it had until I realized that just going about my daily routine I was smoking twice as much, almost, and drinking to excess almost every night, without really knowing that I was."

His thoughts about America being engaged on the threshold of a long war:

"Oh yeah, that's what they keep promising us... gleefully. I see absolutely no other way of dealing with the terrorists. As regretful as I am about it, as a nation we have to do what we have to do and that's ridiculous. You know, I have a friend who was on the next flight after the Lockerbie crash, and I didn't know that until he called me three days later. I didn't understand that terrorist bombing... I don't understand what's going on in Ireland, I don't understand any of that shit, I mean I'm just flummoxed by it. Of course on one level you understand it perfectly well, it's all fundamentalism and fanatical thinking and it's easy to be fanatical."

Is he a religious man?

"I go back and forth on that one; I mean I had religious training when I was younger. When I was twelve years old I was baptized in the black church across the road from my grandmother's house. Don't know how I feel about it. You know, I've gotten into astronomy lately and when you begin to comprehend, if you could, how big the universe is, how immense and ordered it all is you begin to wonder where did the rules come from that move everything around? Is there a mind behind all of this?"

"I was asked 'Were you depressed by the people who thought they would be in charge of things and aren't after 25 years?' And I said, 'No, what I found depressing was the people who were in charge of things 'cause I know those people and I know how they got through English 101!'"

A midlife crisis is when "a guy quits his job at the bank and goes off and lives in the woods with a teenage mushroom gatherer and people say it's his hormones acting up. Well, I don't think it's anything to do with his hormones, I think it's because people he knows get put in charge of things. He reads in the paper that the new head of the missile command is somebody he knew in college as Dipso Dick Donagan."

Trillin spoke about the Deputy Undersecretary of State, another old classmate in the lower part of that lower third, who was sent to the trade talks with Japan. "The Japanese will have California by Christmas," he lamented.

Seeing attorney Ralph W. Moshler, Esquire, in the Yellow Pages after 25 years was scary; "It's Blinko Moshler, the dumbest guy in my class."

The grads were encouraged to look forward to their own 25th reunion, with the hope that they would be "soothed rather than frightened by who has been put in charge of things." The parting advice that "commencement speakers are supposed to give: if between now and then you're in Akron, and you get in trouble, and it's suggested that you consult a prominent member of the Akron Bar, named Ralph W. Moshler, Esquire, I suggest that you turn down that suggestion... cause it's just Blinko!"

Following Trillin, the music was the message as Grammy nominees, The Thunderbird Sisters, performed "September Moon" to honor Elizabeth Chee Chee Haile, Elder of the Shinnecock Nation, who received an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters from Trustee Lester Owens for her work for women and minorities.

Reverend Dr. Holly Haile Davis then spoke of the, "Great Spirit who is called by many names" overseeing these mysterious sacred hills on which this campus sits.

In the spirit of giving, Robert F. X. Sillerman, Southampton College Chancellor, was soundly applauded when he announced that he and his wife, Laura Baudo Sillerman, will match the first $25 gift from each graduate to the college for the first year after their graduation to instill the habit of giving.

President Dr. David Steinberg quoted Adlai Stevenson who said, "Men may be born free, they cannot be born wise." Then in alluding to "my most favorite post-modernist philosopher," Dr. Steinberg quoted Yoda, "May the force be with each and every one of you!" This brought thunderous applause and wild cheers from everyone.

Valedictorian Jason Bruck brought the 1996 guest speaker, Kermit the Frog, with him. Bruck's remarks stressed the importance of "dedication, perseverance, and tenacity" in the pursuit of one's goals.

Following the conferring of the degrees by Dean James La Rocca and President Steinberg the graduates, their families and the faculty enjoyed Ben & Jerry,s Ice Cream and other delights under the tent perched on the hill in the Shinnecocks. Distinguished Alumni Award winner, Edward Godfrey ('71) stood in cap and gown, ice cream in hand, among the recipients of his philanthropy. With the windmill in the background, this setting is an image that this alum can assure that they will hold dear the rest of their lives. With the windmill in the background, the image of this setting, is one that these graduates will hold dear the rest of their lives. •

Much hoopla at this year's Drama Desk Awards in Manhattan on Sunday, May 19, as three East Enders walked away major winners – Montauker Edward Albee's new play The Goat or Who Is Syliva? won for Outstanding Play, and Bridgehampton's Elaine Stritch really scored with both the Outstanding Book of a Musical (co-authored with John Lahr) and Outstanding Solo Performance for her unforgettable show Elaine Stritch At Liberty. Record producer Billy Rosenfield (Sag Harbor) received a Special Award for preservation of musical theatre recordings. Wilson (Continued from page 74)

In addition to Talley's Folly at the Long Wharf, upcoming projects for Wilson include his translation of Ghosts, which will soon be ready for production. He is presently writing the foreword for a new edition of a collection of his works, and in September, as its "playwright in residence," The Signature Theater Company in New York will devote its entire season to his plays with productions of Talley's Folly, Book of Days, Raindance and Burn This (the last starring Edward Norton).

There has also been an onslaught of Lifetime Achievement Awards. ("I got four in one year, and I thought, 'this is beginning to age me, it's beginning to make me feel very old indeed!'")

Last question: if he could do it all over again, what would Lanford Wilson do differently?

"Hmm...I wouldn't have borrowed so much money about ten years ago so I could've kept my apartment in the city."

Dan's Papers is seeking a summer intern for our Production Department.

The ideal candidate will be an experienced user of Photoshop, Quark and Pagemaker and be organized, dependable and a solid typist. College credit is available.

An evening with Jim Turner solo, or with his band is just what the doctor ordered. We were fortunate enough to hear him play an acoustic set for the production and art gang here at Dan's Papers recently and his masterful guitar and harmonica playing raised our spirits on a late production night. You can catch a show with Jim Turner and The Jim Turner Band on Friday, May 24 at 8:00 p.m. at Guild Hall located at 158 Main Street in East Hampton. An evening of rock 'n' roll, blues, reggae, folk, jazz, roots American and Gospel music courtesy of the Bridgehampton First Baptist Church Gospel Choir will be in store. case of misguided people assigning human emotions to animals. (One of them once told me that animals feel shame and humiliation when they perform. They sure hide it well, is what I thought.)

Circuses have been taking place all over the world for two thousand years. I predict they will be around another two thousand years, with the performers, children, parents, circus people and animals having a wonderful time in spite of those wishing to "raise our consciousness" to the "wrongs" being done. I've heard the arguments. I still vote for the circus. •

looks like under her clothes. This was the body of Anna Kournikova. The breasts were small, very well formed, and do not sag in any way."

The judge asked Guccione, who is 71, whether he bothered to look at the woman's face. The body was more important Guccione said.

The videotape of Ms. Benetton was shown to the judge over and over, to help him make a judgement. The screen, always, was set up so that only the judge could see it and nobody else.

At one point during the proceedings, a high school class from a New York City school was conducted into the courtroom so they could see justice at work. They stayed about five minutes, then left.

The ruling on this was to take place last Tuesday. But on Monday, the parties announced they were making a deal and the complaint was withdrawn. Mrs. Benetton would be receiving a certain sum. The ten thousand or so copies of Penthouse not yet distributed would be destroyed. The 1.2 million would remain "out there."

As for me? Since we are profitable, we have a fact checker here at Dan's Papers. He checks the breasts and nipples of every man and woman whose picture appear in our pages. And also the breasts and nipples, by looking through their clothes, of every man and woman who walks through our front door. We offer his services up to Penthouse for future breast "checking." His fee would be small, well formed, and without any sag.

And we hope Mr. Ramaesiri enjoyed the Super Bowl. •

Now at twenty past ten, the Southold Police began taking down the yellow crime tape they had put up across the road. We were free to go. And so we did. I passed the white bomb truck just ten feet on my left, just off the road in front of the Plum Island Ferry building. It was the size of a big, box cube ambulance, all brightly lit inside and filled with police officers. Somewhere in there was the cause of this problem.

Just past midnight, I arrived at my home in East Hampton. Cat, the children and the dogs all greeted me warmly. After awhile I called the Southold Police and, as I suspected, they had a press release they could fax over to me about the incident right then, in the middle of the night. Here is what it said in its entirety.

"Narrative of Incident. 5/19/02 7:05 p.m. Plum Island Ferry Terminal, Route 25, Orient.

"Southold Town Police responded to the Plum Island Ferry Terminal in Orient after security personnel at the terminal observed a subject place a package which appeared suspicious in the terminal mailbox. With the assistance of the Suffolk County Police Emergency Services Unit the mailbox was opened and the contents examined. After this examination the items found in the mailbox were determined not to be of a suspicious nature.

"Prepared by Det. J. Conway Jr., #506."

The next day I learned the "package" was, in fact, a large envelope. It contained junk mail. •

47TH DRAMA DESK AWARDS

The Annual Drama Desk Awards presented by TheatreSport, Ltd. and Robert Blume just gets better and better. Host Rue McClanahan was an inspired choice and slyly entertaining. She kept things nicely moving with Billy Stritch at the piano. Broadway stars such as Andrea Martin, John Lithgow, Bill Pullman, Mercedes Ruehl, Elaine Stritch and Vanessa Williams handed out twenty-five awards. The awards were equally divided with "Best New Play", a tie between Edward Albee's The Goat and Mary Zimmerman's Metamorphoses. Big winners were Thoroughly Modern Millie with five awards, Private Lives and Into the Woods with three awards each. The Last Five Years, Oklahoma, Fortune's Fool, and Elaine Stritch at Liberty each took home two awards. This wonderful show was again televised by NY1 due to the efforts of Randie Levine-Miller the Executive Director for Drama Desk, who has raised the public consciousness of the Awards through her constant efforts. Bravo to everyone involved. Well done!

Dan's North Fork

As SoHo Recovers, NoFo Thrives

By Susan W. Simm

When a place gets "discovered," as the North Fork surely has, an area slowly emerges as the center for the arts. Two young galleries, both hip and happening and about to celebrate their third summer seasons, continue to break new ground in what is rapidly becoming the SoHo of the East End: the waterfront village of Greenport. Side by side with T-shirt and trinket shops, innovative curators are bringing together exhibits that would do a downtown hotspot proud.

Whitney Art Works, taking a lead from the chic Manhattan art center, has been happily ensconced in the loft of an old warehouse on First Street since 2000, proudly displaying its scarlet banner in a decidedly uptown fashion. Deb Whitney, the gallery's founder who last year joked that she was running a non-profit operation, is far more optimistic today.

"We've begun our third season with a bang," said Whitney recently. "The exhibition 'Other Places,' which opened in March, was very popular and sales were brisk. Our best month ever, in fact. The notion of a summer season has evened out into a steady stream year-round. In addition, the community has continued to be enormously supportive, not only in terms of attendance, but also in sales."

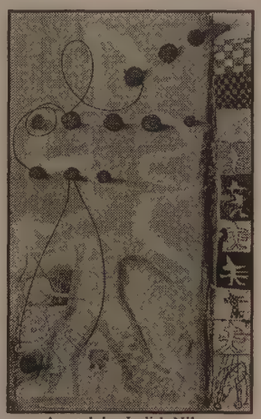
The banner at Whitney Art Works

On the other side of town, as well as the proverbial coin, is another youngster, Art Sites. While also cosmopolitan in feel, this gallery - with its sleek stylishness - would not be at all out of place in Sag Harbor, the South Fork's art center. Founder Glynnis Berry, an architect in her "free time," often combines the work of several artists, each of whom works in different mediums, in many of her shows at the Front Street space.



A work by Judith Nilson

Last year, which was Berry's second, was, to paraphrase Dickens, both the best of times and the worst of times. On the bright side, "The gallery attracted artists of high caliber, such as Raphael Ferrer, Kes Zapkus and, later this fall, Michelle Stuart. Our ceramic exhibits," (a medium that has gotten little exposure in the past and which Berry almost always incorporates into her shows), "have included international artists from Denmark, the Netherlands, England and Japan. The support of both local and distant artists has been gratifying. Seeing people return to view multiple shows is indicative of the interest in the arts here on the North Fork."

And there is no question that that interest is strong. In response to "Greenport's exploding gallery scene," said Whitney, the Greenport Gallery Association has recently been formed. Currently at nine members - including, aside from Whitney and Art Sites, Watermark Gallery, Island Artists, Gallery Pelar, Gallery M, Rich Fiedler, J.D. Smith and soon Alan Bull - the association will share opening nights and host gallery nights with evening hours the last Saturday of every month.

"There is a real energy in this town," said Whitney, who has a very ambitious season planned for her gallery, "and it really shows on opening nights. They have become big events with hoards of people touring from place to place."

On June 1, both galleries will open month-long shows of veteran artists. Whitney welcomes Remsenburg painter Margery Gosnell, an award-winning artist who has exhibited at East Hampton's Guild Hall. Her remarkable series of works about the village of Orient includes small prints and paintings on paper as well as large paintings on canvas, all exploding with color. They also capture the magical summer light over the bays and marshes, the phenomenon that led Jackson Pollock and Willem de Kooning to the South Fork in the '40s.

"Margery's paintings verge on the abstract," said Whitney. "With a fresh playfulness, the works pull the viewer into the painting where they get lost in the bright colors and lively brushstrokes."

"This series began after I visited the town of Orient for a six-week stay in 1999," said Gosnell. "The work has grown to encompass my broader experience of living near the shore. The earlier works may be more literal interpretations of the landscape, while the later works continue to evolve and reflect deeper memories. I work from memory as the actual place may distract me from my vision. I alter proportions, adjust colors... an equivalent to painting the fragrance of a place."

Art Sites will present the works of Judith Nilson in "The Making of a Real Bogle" and Japanese potter Chieko Katsumata in "Ceramics." "The Making of a Real Bogle" explores themes of gender, the search for love and acceptance and the choices made in their pursuit.

"This series was influenced by my fascination with the story of Pinocchio and recently the film, AI," said Nilson. "The 'bogles' consist of an abstract, genderless race of shapes. They differ from one another in texture, size, shape and materials. They are a function of my fantasy about a world where gender distinctions do not exist. A world where life experiences are free from pre-ordained influence of gender or a world preoccupied by it."

Katsumata's work evokes references to both the vessel and natural forms, explains Berry. Brilliant colors that absorb rather than repel have a powdery, textural sense that is physical. "Unlike most Japanese potters, Katsumata began working with pottery in 1973 in Paris, where she studied for four years." Then, in 1978, she established her own studio near a temple garden in the mountains surrounding Kyoto and, as a "woman in a male-dominated field in Japan, she gained confidence as an artist pursuing a unique vision." Katsumata has exhibited in Japan, Switzerland, Amsterdam and Paris.

Berry describes last year as "both wonderful and horrific." Almost canceling an opening scheduled for the Saturday after September 11, she and the artist, Jeff Shapiro, decided to go ahead. "Art was a balm," remembers Berry. "It gave us relief by shifting focus, by injecting a bit of beauty into a scary world." Though not a top priority in these uncertain times, art does "offer people much more than a stock quote. Contemplative paintings instill an inner peace while bolder works, like those of Judith Nilson, hint at possibilities, of a future." In fact, she adds, "Art may just help us survive."

By The Glass...

With Susan Simm

How Low? Merlot

Just as "Chardonnay" became a euphemism for "white wine" in the late '80s – remember how much more sophisticated it felt to order a glass of "Chardonnay" at chic restaurants? – Merlot suffered a similar fate in the stark and über trendy 90s.

In its defense, "Merlot," as opposed to, say, "Cabernet Sauvignon" – a mouthful in more ways than one – does sound cool in the same way "Chardonnay" did while also appealing to that late-century minimalism. As Kelly Alexander, contributing writer for Food & Wine, notes, "Merlot, everyone's favorite red wine in the 90s, reached its trendoid apotheosis when it was name-checked not once but twice on Seinfeld." Fans of the show may remember the second incident when, in 1997, Kramer so memorably uttered, "I live for Merlot." Alexander, who, though admitting to putting Merlot on a "tired trend" list that same year (prior to Kramer's proclamation, I might add) goes on to relate a story told to her recently by a friend that she found distressing.

"Just the other day, my buddy was dining at Lupa (in Manhattan). He asked for a glass of Merlot. 'We don't have Merlot,' the waiter sniffed, rolling his eyes. How did a wine become a symbol of the passé?"

How, indeed? Is it our relentless desire for the next new thing? Or just infatuation with hip language? Are we tired of the word or the wine?

To my mind, the problem seems to be more a matter of semantics than a fault of the grape. Merlot, as Alexander points out, is, aside from being grown all over the world, the main grape grown in France's illustrious Bordeaux region. Often blended with other grapes, it is sometimes, and in the case of Chateau Petrus, famously, left alone.

Here on the North Fork, where tradition is still honored and vogues eschewed, however, the much-maligned Merlot, happily out of range of the next-cool-thing radar, is reaching a level of quality that would do a celebrated French estate proud. As the grape is well suited to cultivation here – one winery, Raphael, even considered growing it exclusively – there are quite a few very good Merlots being produced. Almost all of the North Fork's wineries make a Merlot and Lenz Winery's '97 vintage even scored higher in a blind tasting in Manhattan than Petrus' '95 and '97 vintages.

Macacari Vineyards in Mattituck, rapidly becoming famous for its Sauvignon Blanc – the 2001, released earlier this year, is nearly sold out – has also just released its 2000 Merlot. Laden with lush, dark fruit flavors and a long, smooth and satisfying finish, the wine is a delight.

"Our effort with this wine was to maintain the ripeness of the fruit, reducing the spicy character of some Long Island Merlots," explains Macari winemaker Jose Montilla. "We also reduced the aging in oak… to maintain the integrity of the fruit." The result? "The taste of the fruit is not so hidden so everyone – from novice to expert – can enjoy a Long Island Merlot."

Food-friendly and medium bodied, this lovely wine is available at the winery for $25.99. Recommended.

So, while I may not share Kramer's exclusive passion for Merlot, I cannot ignore the growing accomplishments of our local winemakers. After all, if Chateau Petrus '90 can score a perfect 100 according to Wine Spectator and retail for over $1500 a bottle, anything seems possible. Cheers.

THE NORTH

A Conversation With Jonathan, Michael And Thomas Of The Cooperage Inn In Baiting Hollow

As Tolstoy so famously wrote at the start of Anna Karenina, "Happy families are all alike; every unhappy family is unhappy in its own way." The same is true of restaurants. Successful establishments all share the same traits – good food, professional service, comfortable atmosphere – while failures fail for a myriad of often unrelated reasons.

The Cooperage Inn, on Sound Avenue in Baiting Hollow, was long ago a bar and grill called Bernie's, no doubt the hangout of farmers and their crews fresh from the fields. After its transformation into a country restaurant in the mid-90s by the Purdys, it was purchased by Jonathan Perkins and his wife, Rene, in 1999. Perkins, with a lifetime of experience behind him, had a vision. He would create a sophisticated yet down-to-earth eatery with an emphasis on the freshest ingredients, casual yet professional service and value for your dollar.

Michael Hegeman, Thomas Laimo, Jonathan Perkins

Enter Thomas Laimo and Michael Hegeman, young culinary school graduates with upscale dining experience. The result? One of the best restaurants on the North Fork, which for decades languished as a culinary wasteland. No longer. With the discovery that vineyards would flourish in the temperate climate, the landscape is changing at a rapid pace. And really good restaurants are no longer rare.

On a recent visit to the restaurant, I caught up with the co-executive chefs and Jonathan to see what they have in store for the upcoming season. Here's what they had to say.

Susan Simm: Summer's almost here. What are you looking forward to most?

Michael Hegeman: I'm excited about all the fresh produce and it's just starting. Every morning Tom and I pick up produce from the local farms.

Jonathan Perkins: Right now we're into fresh asparagus, spinach, cold weather crops. Next we'll be into strawberries, different types of lettuces, baby arugula. In fact, Schmitt Farms (down the road) is going to grow specialty items just for us...

Thomas Laimo: like watercress (with great enthusiasm).

The sauces here are fabulous. It seems like reduction sauces made from homemade stock are becoming a lost art.

JP: All of our sauces start off with a stock, either veal or chicken. We make these from scratch twice a week.

MH: Nothing comes out of a can.

TL: Everything here is made from scratch. It's very time consuming, but absolutely worth the effort.

I agree completely. Do you have any big plans for the upcoming season?

JP: We are about to begin a major renovation that will expand the kitchen, dining room and outdoor seating area that we hope will be completed in four months. We'll have a new outdoor tiki bar, outdoor dining, it's going to be great.

TL: Maybe with sushi...

Hmmmmm...I hope so. Jonathan, to what do you owe your continuing success?

JP: Teamwork. Also, the schooling and experience that both chefs have had over the years really equips them to handle a lot. Myself, I've learned the business by being in it my whole life. It's a great team. We feed off of one another, creatively.

MH: It's also the guys in the kitchen, helping us, assisting us, we wouldn't be able to get the food together if it wasn't "Just Kid'n" A Must See, No Kiddin'!

All of the local storks have been gossiping about Greenport's new arrival, and while it isn't a bouncing new baby, it does provide everything that the fashion-conscious stork could need for delivering your new bundle in high style. Not to mention keeping that bundle elegantly clad for the next dozen or so years.

What am I talking about? Just Kid'n, the new children's department store that now graces Front Street where the old IGA was located.

Carol Kulpa, Owner

The transformation is amazing and worth seeing even if you have no kids or grandchildren of your own to spoil. The store is every child's fantasy. As you enter, you are greeted by George, the nine-foot tall stuffed giraffe. Multi-leveled, the store is painted the color of whipped cream with pastel carpets and baby quilts draping banisters and rails. >From the second floor gallery, a host of mammoth stuffed animals smile down at shoppers.

Each department is a separate area of the store. Needless to say, the toys are front and center with a little playing area so that kids can test out some of the merchandise and allow their parents some time to browse. To the right up a small flight of stairs is the new arrivals department where you can find the perfect layette, or christening gown, receiving blanket or rattle. The other departments cater to infants, toddlers, girls and boys 4-6X, girls and boys 7-16. Each is in its separate nook, each has comfortable dressing rooms, and each provides distractions for kids who are less than avid shoppers: rocking horses, stuffed animals, trains and books. Through the gallery toward the back of the store is the shoe department, delightfully decorated in a jungle motif. There's even a department for children's furniture, everything from cribs to car seats, beautiful rugs for baby's room and a rocking Noah's Ark replete with paired wooden animals.

The merchandise is upscale and up-to-the-minute. I browsed the girls 7-16 shop and found tied-dyed capri pants in shades of lavender and aqua topped with a sparkling turquoise belt. Handpainted jeans were accompanied by a matching jacket with lapels edged in copper glitter. Perhaps my favorite was a pair of stretch bell bottom camouflage pants dusted with gold! Such is the stuff of childhood fantasies!

For the more conservative pre-teener, there are sweater sets and jeans and everything from bathing suits to heart-stopping dresses for weddings or other special occasions.

For young gentlemen, there were stripes and plaids, khakis and jeans, all handsomely coordinated.

How did this fabulous store land in Greenport? Owners Carol and Robert Kulpa are certainly not newcomers to the retail business though it is Carol's expertise that brought them to this venture, Bob readily admits. Carol opened her first children's store at the age of twenty. By twenty-nine, she owned six stores, one of which, a women's clothing store, that Carol designed in the guest house of the Vanderbilt Mansion in Hyde Park, won an award from the New York Historical Society for its charming renovation.

But at twenty-nine, Carol found herself widowed with three children. She took a job in Columbus, Indiana, where she helped restore the downtown area by planning and designing a number of retail establishments.

From there, she was recruited by Lord & Taylor as a troubleshooter for their Dallas and Houston stores. Over the years she was promoted to merchandise manager of the twelve East Coast stores.

It was when she took a leave of absence to care for her dying mother that Carol met present husband Bob, who owns an insurance agency in Palisades Park. Twelve years for the rest of the kitchen staff.

The food is very consistent here. Even if something is improved upon, if it's not what the customer is expecting...

TL and MH in unison: Exactly.

JP: And we've developed a menu, a collaboration. Tommy's a real gourmet, Mike is really into the production end...

And baking, right?

MH: I bake almost all the breads we serve, including a special fruit bread, such as strawberry, in season.

TL: Mike's going to make foccacia bread when we expand the kitchen.

JP: We also do off-premises catering, upscale weddings, as well as clam bakes and barbecues.

MH: Pig roasts...

TL: The barbecues are really good. If you want to have a party for 1500 people...

(I don't think I even know 1500 people...) What do you do for barbecues?

TL: Assorted grilled items, pastas...

Tom, tell me about your idea for a Great Chefs of the North Fork cook-off?

TL: Well, my idea is to draw people out to the North Fork with a benefit, maybe including a food competition among North Fork chefs, and sell tickets to benefit a charity.

Where would you hold it?

JP: We could hold it here if it happened in the fall after our renovations are complete. I think it was Tommy who mentioned that all great chefs events are geared toward the South Fork, the Hamptons...

TL: South Fork, western Suffolk or Nassau. We want to bring some press out to the North Fork. It's such a secret, nobody knows about it.

It's a great idea, Tom. It would be wonderful to combine it with local wines...

Everyone: Yes!

I recently read that a Mediterranean diet is supposed to be the healthiest.

TL: Yes, olive oil, garlic, vinegars... That's one of our favorite ways to cook.

JP: I'd define this restaurant as casual, country dining with a Mediterranean flair, wouldn't you? (He looks toward Tom and Michael)

TL: Mediterranean American. At least 60% of our specials in the summer are seafood.

JP: Grilled, blackened, with mango salsa.

(I'm getting hungry listening to these guys...)

MH: We also love local seafood, soft shell crabs are in season right now.

JP: And we're going through 4-5 cases of local asparagus a week (that's between 120-150 pounds!)

TL: It's a little more expensive to buy from local farmers but there's no comparison in the quality of something shipped from California. How long does it take that to get here? Our local produce is picked that day...

JP: with the irrigation water from the farm still on it!

So what makes Cooperage Inn special?

JP: It's important to me, and these chefs know it, that portions must be generous. Some restaurants charge big bucks for little plates, trying to keep profit margins up, but we can afford to serve larger portions because we do the volume.

MH: We want to give customers a fair deal.

(Don't I know! Have you tried getting a reservation on a weekend night?)

JP: This also means that the more we move food ...

TL: the fresher it is.

MH: Sometimes it amazes even us how much volume we do.

So what else do you attribute your obvious success to?

JP: Experience, but also having excellent chefs and a good support staff. Everyone's been here a long time.

MH: And Tom, Jonathan and I all plan menus and holiday specials together. We compare what worked or didn't work in prior years.

JP: Real teamwork.

You're lucky.

TL and MH: We're all lucky.

The Villa Maria Siena Spirituality Center

By Dan Rattiner

One of the grandest homes ever built in the Hamptons is in Water Mill, right in the center of town overlooking Mecox Bay and the ocean beyond. Built around the turn of the last century, it is an ornate Victorian structure originally constructed for department store millionaire Joshiah Lombard and his family. It was on 16 acres, had a guest cottage, and a main house built in an elaborate rococco style with ten bedrooms.

The Lombard family owned the property until 1930 when, at the bottom of the depression, they sold it to the Dominicans who turned it into the Villa Maria parochial high school and religious retreat. They also deeded a triangle of their land to the Town of Southampton, about one and a half acres, and this land today is the Water Mill town green with the beautiful old English windmill on it.

The school closed in the late 1960s, but the retreat continued, with nuns in residence and others coming out to help out. And thus it remained, as pretty much a private affair until about six years ago when the order decided that the property was large enough so that the nuns and priests could still come out in the autumn for their retreat, but that the home could also serve as a spirituality center so that people from all walks of life and religions could use it to better themselves and experience the beauty of this place. Today, four nuns live year 'round in this home, supervising a staff of five. Sister Honora Nolty is the Program Director and Father Richard M. Lawless is the Executive Director. There are programs in poetry and Tai Chi, a Women's Gathering, a Weekend of Creative Healing and a program called Joy Through Movement. There are also concerts and opera performances. Last summer, there was a concert given by the famous Irish tenor Ronan Tynan. This summer there will be the opera Il Travatore, a violin concert and a program discussion entitled Dialogue Between Science and Religion. There will also be the PONY Awards fundraiser on June 8, and the interior of the main house will be, for the second year in a row, The Showhouse for many famous designers in our community to show their work. The Showhouse will be open from the June 29 Gala through July 28, with funds raised to benefit Villa Maria. Villa Maria is home for the Annual Designer Showcase where designers have the opportunity to decorate each of the rooms in their own notable style. Designers in the past include: Kenneth Alpert, Eugenia Au Kim, John Barman, Thomas Britt, Michael Christiano and Crain & Ventolo.

"Much of this was from last year's Showhouse," Sister Honora told me. "This ceiling relief was made by computer generation on paper. Its the work of George Adde. A remarkable thing."

But not all is a salute to the past. On the second floor there is a state of the art business center and video conference room.

"Next week, about 100 people from the Alliance Church will be coming here for a seminar," Sister Honora told me. "They will be coming from Connecticut, Pennsylvania, New York, Rhode Island and New York and New Jersey. The conference will be videod live to the main Alliance Church Theological School in Chicago."

Shall I end this with their phone number? Why not. It is 726-4740 and feel free to call to learn about their many programs. You can also find them on their web site at sienawatermill.com

Sister Honora took me for a walk through the building recently. There is the main living room with a grand fireplace, ceiling chandeliers and filigree. There is a library with books in glass cases. There is a great entryway with a flying staircase going up to the second and third floors. And there is a wonderful, wonderful sun porch, facing south, with the beautiful lawns, populated by seagulls and geese, sweeping down to the bay and the ocean. In this little porch is magnificent wicker furniture and a wonderful bas relief on the ceiling of a 1600 celestial map of the night sky. ■

Marty Richards Shares The Sweet Smell of Success in Southampton

By Lise Visser

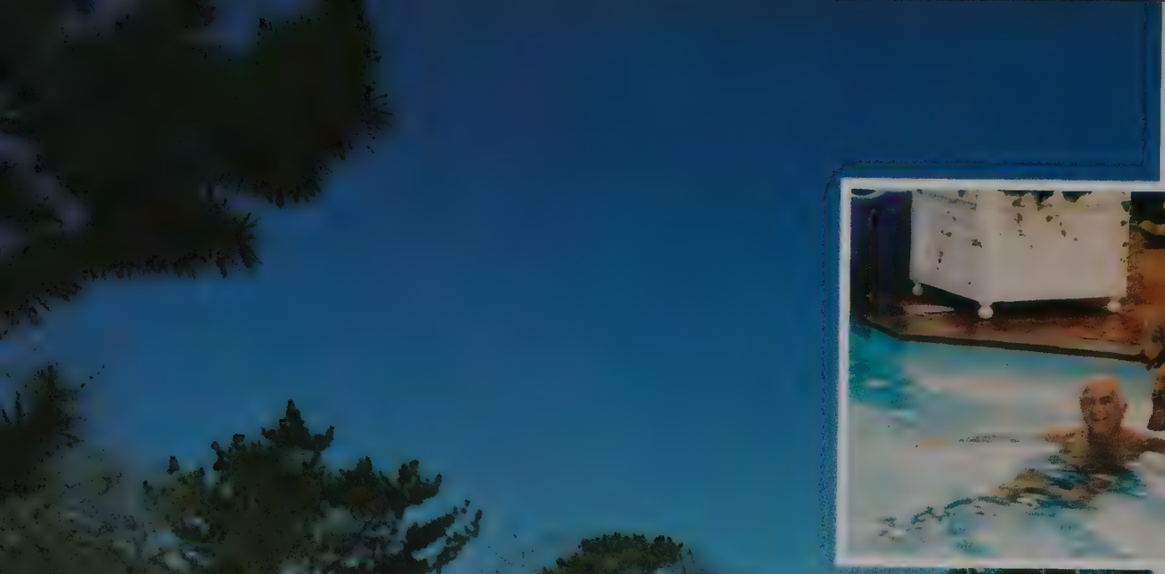
Producer Marty Richards' estate in Southampton, By the Sea, is the showplace for Hamptons blockbuster benefits and if these walls could talk, they'd sing. The American musical theatre's top talent slept here, in the vibrant grandeur of an ocean front setting.

Jerry Herman penned some of the music and lyrics at By the Sea for the premier megahit gay musical, La Cage Aux Folles which ran 1,761 original performances. Funny Girl composer Jule Styne reposed here, as did his colleague Steven Sondheim, who put it all together for Sweeney Todd here, winning the Tony for Best Score in 1979.

"They all played the piano and I should have had them carve their initials in it" Richards relates. Broadway's notables top the guest lists for "lots of big parties" held in the spacious family room and theatricality integrates beautifully throughout. The library, one of Richards' favorite rooms, encompasses a wet bar fashioned "from the ticket booth from Her Majesty's Theatre, the only thing left standing after the blitz. The room was built around it".

Another distinctive space is the green onyx Master bathroom facing the ocean and surrounded by white orchids. Richards quips that he can "hide and get away from the phone" there. He finds further respite in a sun stroked breakfast room.

The Guest House



Personal cuisine is well met by Richards' cook of 15 years, Arlette Colon, who attends the kitchens in both the New York and Southampton homes. Richards hired the first live in cook, Toni Dobies, after he won a Super Jackpot in Las Vegas. Her family friend, Peter Bertrand, went to work for Richards as the Estate Manager at age eighteen, and twenty years later he is still with him. Richards notes with some irony how Cordon Bleu trained chef Joseph Dullek was asked to prepare diet fare during his tenure at By the Sea. For gala benefits a caterer is brought in, most often Robbins Wolfe.

The third owner, Richards has fostered the manse's architectural integrity since its purchase in 1976. "The exterior was never touched since 1920. It is identical to the photographs given by the nephew of the original owners, the Stanleys (Morgan Stanley)". Repositioning some walls has opened up interior spaces. Treasured selections of fabric and wallpaper patterns remain unchanged.

The eclectic collection of art displays Jim Henson's Muppet tree, Spruce Greensleeves, an acquisition from an AIDS benefit. A sculpture of Magritte's Grand Illusions exhibits three parts of a torso. Seward Johnson's Crack the Whip is one of five made, a poignant reminder of life and joyful pursuit in this elegant pastoral locale. Sculptor-and the first black astronaut trainee-Ed Dwight was particular about the sale of his bronze, Jazz. "Dwight had to see where it would be put" before an agreement could be struck.

Animal figures dominate the pet cemetery that was started by the Stanley's children, who hand crafted pebbled memorials to their departed. The Richards added three small plots. Music from wind chimes charms the atmosphere there.

The picturesque pond "has a life of its own, there are bass in it and many other kinds of fish, and water lilies," This was the favorite secluded spot of his late wife and partner at the Producer Circle, Mary Lea Johnson Richards, where every morning at 5:30AM she would meet with Peter Bertrand to discuss the gardens. There is a small statue of Mary Lea at age three watering the flowers.

The extraordinary gardens appear on the tours of both the London and Bronx Botanical Societies and the Long Island Rose Society. But like Robert Dash at the Madoo Conservancy Richards will not cut his own blooms. Floral displays for massive events are brought in. Landscaping architects for this estate, Roger Roberts & Associates, are well regarded Hamptons horticulturalists.

Memorable events held by Marty and Mary Lea reflect a lifetime of showmanship. To celebrate Mary Lea's 60th birthday a circus tent was erected on the tennis courts and a dog act, stilt walkers, a magician and robot entertained. The sea side manor "is always filled with people but lonely without Mary Lea."

Reminiscing about their first anniversary party in 1976-his most beloved event here-Richards told of the 600 revelers, each receiving cake by Sylvia Weinstein with their birth signs. Guests like Michael Bennett, Bob Fosse, Chita Rivera, Gwen Verdon, Neil Simon, and Alan Carr were entertained by everyone from the Village People to Jerry Herman.

As one of the Hamptons premier hosts Richards muses, "at dinner you can sit next to someone who drives a truck on one side and a princess on the other". A combination of old and new faces is energizing "or it becomes boring. The kids keep you young." Neighbors on the A List include Ambassador Carl Spielvogel and his wife, Barbaralee Diamonstein, Felix Rohatyn, Arthur Ochs Sulzberger Sr., Al and Judy Taubman and fashion designer Vera Wang.

Marty Richards delights in Southampton with "all the shopkeepers he knew for years" fondly remembering "the peace of the Hamptons" in years past. New York hospitality has gained a new meaning given the philanthropic and charitable use of this majestic haven. ■

Alec Baldwin at home in the Hamptons

By Dan Rattiner

We caught up with Alec Baldwin at his Amagansett home this spring, just before his stint on Saturday Night Live, his visit to Florida (where he jabbed at Jeb Bush about his politics) and a three week film shoot in Nevada for his role in John Frankenheimer's Path to War, a film about events leading up to the escalation of the Vietnam War. He's been very busy of late. In the last year he produced the film the Devil and Daniel Webster starring Dan Ackroyd, Kim Cattrall and Jennifer Love Hewitt, a movie which is still awaiting a release date, and roles in The Royal Tenenbaums, Final Fantasy: the Spirit Within, Cats & Dogs, Nuremberg, Pearl Harbor and State and Main. ■

Serves 2

Soft Shell Crabs

6 Soft Shell crabs (gills and face removed), flour for dredging, 1 cup white wine, olive oil, salt and pepper to taste.

Method:

Salt and pepper both sides of crabs, dredge in flour and shake off excess. Heat sauté pan with enough olive oil to cover bottom and sauté crabs for about two minutes on each side. Deglaze pan – make sure it's still hot – with white wine and add cumin vinaigrette (recipe follows), simmering for two minutes. Arrange three soft shells in the middle of bowls and top with remainder of the sauce in pan. Top with Napa slaw.

Tomato Cumin Vinaigrette

4 diced ripe plum tomatoes, + diced red onion, 2 Tbs. chopped cilantro, 1/8 tsp. chopped garlic, 1 Tbs. ground cumin, 1/2 cup olive oil, + cup red wine vinegar, salt and pepper to taste.

Method:

Combine all ingredients in blender and puree until smooth.

Napa Valley Slaw

1 head thinly sliced Napa cabbage, 1 small, shredded carrot, + thinly sliced red onion, 1 Tbs. black sesame seeds, 1 Tbs. white sesame seeds.

Marinade:

2 Tbs. chopped ginger, + bunch chopped scallions, 1 tsp. Coleman's dry mustard, juice of 1 lime, + cup dark sesame oil, 2 Tbs. brown sugar, 1 tsp. chopped garlic, + cup soy sauce, 1/8 cup teriyaki sauce, 1/8 cup orange juice.

Method:

Combine cabbage, carrot, onion and sesame seeds in bowl. Combine all marinade ingredients in a separate bowl and whisk thoroughly. Toss marinade with ingredients in first bowl. Top crabs with slaw. Bon Apetit.

theatre review: brave "indians"

A recent study indicates that people who watch a great deal of television report that they have more friends than do people who watch little TV. Truth is, on average, they don't have more friends; they just perceive TV characters as people they actually know. Well, if you're looking to expand your base of friendship, consider a subscription to the North Fork Community Theatre. Having attended all their plays so far this season, I can guarantee that not only will you enjoy several entertaining evenings of theater, but faces will become so familiar that they'll begin to feel like family.

Such was the case on my recent visit to the opening night performance of Ten Little Indians, the classic Agatha Christie murder mystery. Undoubtedly one of the most enduring "whodunits" of all time, the story of ten strangers invited by a mysterious host for a weekend at a country house on an otherwise uninhabited island, has an interesting history of its own. First published as a novel by Christie in 1939, it was entitled "Ten Little Niggers," a term that was apparently less pejorative in England at that time. Christie herself adapted the play which opened in London in 1943 under the same title. When it moved to Broadway the following year, the title became Ten Little Indians, a reference to both the small statues that grace the mantelpiece (and that disappear one by one as each successive character is murdered) and the framed poem which describes how each will die. (Four little Indians go out to sea/A red herring swooped down, and then there were three.)

And, yes, there are red herrings galore as the play builds slowly and dramatically to the third act denouement. You see, the ten characters have been invited by the unknown host because each is responsible for the death of another individual but has escaped punishment. Justice, they are told, will now be meted out.

Why, then, did I entitle this review "Brave 'Indians'?" First of all, it's difficult to tackle a play that is so well known. There have been no fewer than four movie versions. But probably the main reason that this play is so difficult to pull off is that the characters are so distinctly British. Sir Lawrence Wargrave is the respected jurist, Army Captain Philip Lombard, a recent returnee from South Africa , William Blore, a dedicated gumshoe straight out of Scotland Yard. And as such, each should speak with a distinct variation on the mother tongue. After all, as ago they bought a house in Orient, and fell in love with the North Fork.

Future plans? Carol says that she's thinking of opening a juniors' clothing store, a maternity shop and a pet store, for which she already has a name: Pampered Paw and Pussycat. Quite ambitious to be thinking about when Just Kid'n is in its infancy. "We're not the kind of people who look for retirement," says Bob. "We'd be bored to death."

Well, all of their considerable talents and energies have certainly been poured into this fabulous establishment. Next time you're visiting Greenport's famous carousel, pop across the street. It'll make you wish you were a kid again!

Just Kid'n is located at 38-44 Front Street in Greenport. Starting Memorial Day weekend, hours will be Mon.-Fri. 10 to 8, Sat. 10-9, Sun. 12-6. Call 631-477-1100.*

Let our family tradition be the start of yours.
In 1946, Captain Bill Lieblein opened the Port of Egypt Fishing Station, giving hundreds of boaters an opportunity to explore and enjoy the East End waters. Since then, his dream has grown into an award-winning, full-service marina. Still family-owned and operated, Port of Egypt upholds its family tradition of celebrating the season and providing customers with exceptional service.

Henry Higgins tells us in My Fair Lady, Lerner and Loewe's superlative musical adaptation of George Bernard Shaw's Pygmalion, "An Englishman's way of speaking absolutely classifies him." And that's the problem. Few amateur American actors can sustain a convincing British accent of any type, no less one that reflects the class of their character. Unfortunately, this was a problem for a number of the actors in this production and it proved distracting.

Another difficulty involved in producing this play is that it is a period piece. While the movie adaptations took liberties with time and place – one version took place on an African safari, another in Iran! – the play is rooted by the language, some of which is so dated as to be funny. When one of the characters surmises that their host is among them, he describes the person as "probably a dangerous homicidal lunatic." Oh, horrors! How can an audience find that scary when we're acquainted with Hannibal Lechter? It wasn't supposed to, but the line got a few laughs. Later, as the pressure mounts, another character, Dr. Armstrong, realizing the hopelessness of their situation, begins to laugh maniacally. This time we all laughed though I had the suspicion that it wasn't intended to be funny.

And the final obstacle to be overcome by this intrepid cast was that a few of the murders actually occur onstage. Again, today's audiences are a jaded lot. We witness over a thousand TV murders each year, so whatever happens on that stage had better be convincing.

A host of difficulties, indeed. A number of the actors succumbed to them, particularly to problems with the accent and intonation. Fortunately for the audience, however, they seemed to be killed off early in the play.

And despite all this, a few of the performances were really noteworthy. Marilee Scheer as the self-righteous religious fanatic Emily Brent was superb. She also maintained a flawless British accent. Bruce Bloom was a stolid but likable Sir Lawrence; his intelligence and dependability anchored the entire cast. Judging by his program bio, Matthew W. Chizever must be barely out of high school, and yet he was a standout as the cocky Captain Lombard. And the production was graced by a beautiful and talented leading lady, Tara Borsman, who played the courageous Vera Claythorne. The set, designed by Bob Darin, was quite visually appealing, the best of the season.

So, while Ten Little Indians might be their greatest challenge this season, I was actually surprised by the murderer, sat there rooting for my "friends," and ended up having an entertaining evening.

–Jolie Trueman-Honey

silvia lehrer's cooking column

Memorial Day (or Decoration Day) is the official observance for decorating the graves of American servicemen and woman. It is particularly significant that we also honor those defending our shores today. We'll gather around with family and friends for this three-day holiday – the unofficial beginning of the summer season. And food, as with all events, plays a pivotal role.

It is also the time of the year to dust off the grill for a barbecue. But...I'm thinking brunch. Brunch may be any meal that is eaten in place of breakfast and lunch and you don't have to worry about the weather. But for aficionados of this dining affair who love to linger from late morning to early afternoon, brunch is far from just "any meal."

Often served buffet-style on weekends, brunch may combine a few brunch classics such as rum-flavored French toast with local strawberries, a spring-like frittata, buttermilk scones, low-country grits with bacon, poached salmon with mayonnaise verte, vanilla coffee cakes or just use one or two to complement your usual spread. Just be sure the recipes allow much of the preparation to be done ahead, leaving you with little last minute preparation and plenty of them to spend with your guests.

RUMMY FRENCH TOAST WITH STEWED STRAWBERRIES

Southampton resident Melissa Aery, who returned from a recent trip to the British Virgin Islands, swooned over this rum flavored French toast with a luscious topping of fresh stewed strawberries. I was inspired.
Serves 4 or double recipe to serve 8

For the strawberries:
1 1/4 cups water
2/3 cup sugar
1/2 lemon
2 whole cloves
1 pint strawberries, hulled and rinsed
1 tablespoon dark rum

For the French toast:
2 extra-large eggs
1/2 teaspoon coarse (kosher) salt
1 cup milk
1 tablespoon plus 1 teaspoon dark rum
4-6 slices of brioche or challah cut 3/4 inch thick
Unsalted butter

1. Bring water and sugar to the edge of a boil and stir to dissolve the sugar. Add halved lemon and cloves and simmer liquid briskly for 10-12 minutes until a light syrup. Put in the prepared strawberries and continue to cook for 3-4 minutes longer. Remove from heat and stir in the rum. Can be prepared one or two days ahead to this point. Cover and refrigerate as necessary.

2. Beat eggs in a bowl and add salt. Stir in milk and rum. Soak 2 slices of bread in the mixture at a time for at least 10-15 minutes.

3. Melt 1 tablespoon butter in a non-stick skillet or a griddle and put in the egg soaked bread slices, one or two at a time. Cook about 50 seconds to one minute until golden brown, Carefully turn and brown other side, about 30-40 seconds longer. Transfer to warm plates as they are done. Meanwhile soak additional bread slices and cook as above, adding a bit more butter to the skillet as needed. Serve at once with chilled stewed strawberries spooned over the warm French toast.

HERB FRITTATA "LAYER" CAKE

A frittata "layer" cake is simply individual omelets each cooked with a mix of fresh herbs. It has the look and taste of springtime.
Serves 8-10

12 large eggs
1-2 teaspoons coarse (kosher) salt
6-8 tablespoons chopped fresh herbs, parsley, basil, chives, chervil and tarragon
4-5 tablespoons unsalted butter or olive oil
2-3 shallots, finely chopped
Freshly ground pepper
Sprigs of fresh herbs for garnish

1. Beat eggs in a bowl with salt until it falls steadily from the fork or whisk. Add the herbs and stir to mix.

2. Heat 1 tablespoon butter or oil in a non-stick skillet. Saute the shallots briefly until tender, about 40-50 seconds, and transfer to the egg mixture. Add a little more butter or oil to the skillet and when hot pour in one-third of the eggs. Shake pan back and forth gently to allow uncooked egg to run to the edge of the pan. When the eggs are set and well detached from the edge of the pan place a plate face down over the pan. Hold the plate firmly with oven mitts, reverse pan and turn out the frittata. Return the pan to heat and carefully slide the frittata back into the skillet to cook other side. Cook for a minute or two and slide frittata onto a serving dish.

3. Prepare two more frittatas as above. Layer them, on an attractive platter, with a mixture of prepared herbs with whole chives peeking out of each layer. Prepare up to one day ahead. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate. Bring to room temperature and cut into wedges for serving.

POACHED SALMON WITH MAYONNAISE VERTE

Poaching a whole fish makes an admirable presentation any time. Here is an elegant way to present it for brunch.
Serves 8-10

For the verte sauce:
1 cup water cress leaves
1 cup parsley sprigs
1/4 cup snipped chives
Coarse (kosher) salt
1 cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 clove garlic, finely chopped
2-3 tablespoons cream to thin, optional

For the salmon:
5-6 pound whole salmon
Cucumber slices and watercress for garnish

For the court bouillon:
1/2 cup white wine vinegar
Enough water to barely cover fish, about 2-3 quarts
1 bay leaf
1/4 cup chopped onion
1/4 cup chopped carrot
1/2 cup chopped celery
3-4 sprigs parsley
6-8 black peppercorns

1. Place watercress, parsley, chives and salt in a bowl. Add boiling water just to cover. Drain well and squeeze dry in a clean kitchen towel. Chop the mixture and put into a bowl with mayonnaise, lemon juice and garlic and stir to mix. Add cream little by little if sauce needs thinning, optional. Serve from a sauceboat with the poached fish.

2. Have fishmonger prepare salmon for poaching. You may have the head removed but leave the tail on. Have cheesecloth on hand.

3. In a fish poacher or stainless roasting pan large enough to hold the fish combine ingredients for the court bouillon and bring to a boil. Adjust heat and simmer for 25-30 minutes.

4. Meanwhile wrap fish in a double thickness of cheesecloth. Twist and tie the ends with kitchen string to make a "handle". Lower fish into the simmering liquid, cover pan and cook over medium heat for 16-18 minutes. Do not allow the liquid to boil at any time. When done allow fish to cool in the liquid, about 10 minutes. Lift fish from liquid and transfer to a platter. Unwrap fish and remove skin with the point of a paring knife. Carefully roll over fish with the aid of the cheesecloth and remove skin from second side. Cover fish with overlapping cucumber slices and a bouquet of watercress at the head end of the fish.

Note: The sauce and poached fish may be completely prepared ahead. Refrigerate covered, overnight, until ready to serve. Bring to room temperature before serving.

Silvia Lehrer will teach Thursday evening hand-on cooking classes beginning May 30 through June 20. Call (631) 537 7831 or e-mail cookhamptn@aol.com for schedule.

There are a few new faces making magic in local kitchens this season. Coming to Pacific East (267-7770) from Miami's world famous Nemo restaurant on South Beach is newly named Chef de Cuisine Joseph Isidori. Joseph is a native of Westchester, NY and has tons of experience in fine seafood preparation. Sounds like a good match for Pac East's water-borne specialties.

Looking west, the new Executive Chef in front of the easel at Painters' Restaurant (286-6264) in Bellport is turning heads. Michael Keaveny was the opening Chef at the famous Rocco's Seafood Grill in San Francisco, where he earned 2 1/2 stars from the hard-to-please San Francisco Chronicle for his opening menu. His new menu at Painters' is a seasonal mix of fresh seafood and prime meats, rivaling in artistry the sculpture and paintings adorning the dining room. Welcome to the island, Mike, and good luck with your new bride, too.

Tierra Mar has some exciting things happening over in Westhampton Beach. They have a new Wednesday Tapas Night with a huge selection of those tasty little treats of which the Spanish are so fond. And if that's not enough, the night includes a live salsa band playing swing tunes for dancing all night long. Baila! On a more reserved note, Tierra Mar is also offering a four-session wine school, featuring instruction by their sommelier Ron Falango. The course begins Thursday, May 30, and runs every Thursday through the end of June. Call Tierra Mar at 288-2700 to reserve a spot.

Tonight marks the opening of the kick-off benefit of the season. The Hamptons Auto Classic is a three-day whirlwind of classic cars, sexy celebs, and money for a good cause. It's taking place in Bridgehampton, and culminates with the Hamptons Concours D'Elegance on Sunday, May 26. The Concours benefits the Carol M. Baldwin Breast Cancer Research Fund. Yes, all of the Baldwins will be there in support of their Mom's fund. The event includes a fashion show, awards ceremony, and of course, a VIP tasting tent. Participants in the tasting include Art of Eating, Riccardo's Seafood House, Saracen, The Paradise, The Maidstone Arms, George Martin, American Bistro, Tierra Mar/Atlantica Catering, and Rubi Red, among others. Gentlemen, start your engines! Call 537-1868 for info.

Rowdy Hall (324-8555) in East Hampton just had the floors and the menu revamped, and both are looking sharp! New menu items include tuna nicoise, chicken fried steak, a pork sandwich, and baked marinated local squid. Down home dishes from a down home joint- the Dish'll see ya at the bar.

Speaking of down home, Turtle Crossing (324-7166) has expanded their hours to full summer-season swing as of this weekend. Lunch will be served on weekends, and dinner will be served seven days. Look for the Stefanie Cardinal Group playing live jazz on Thursday nights from 5 to 8 p.m. and happy hour Sunday through Friday from 5 to 7 p.m.

The Clam Bar (267-6348) is now open for the season. They're serving lunch and dinner seven days a week. The Dish's fried clam quotient can finally be restored to pre-Labor Day levels.

The Beacon (725-7088) has added two inventive new dishes to their already delicious lineup. First up is codfish baked in parchment with smoked scallops, tatsoi, and grilled vegetable Israeli couscous; followed by a pan seared loin of lamb with white beans and roasted corn succotash. Can't beat it!

Finally, another early tremor on the Dish's secret celebrity radar:

95 School Street recently played "Love Shack" to B-52's front man Fred Schneider. Evidently he popped in for dinner recently with friends, though no one saw his Chrysler out front.

Dining in The Hamptons

Gurney's Inn
290 Old Montauk Highway, Montauk
631-668-2345

If we were to consider the globe an entrée and the wealth of the world as sauces, then the Hamptons would be covered in sauces of every kind imaginable. People out here like their sauces and some people have more sauce than others, but overall we live in a sauce-rich locale. However, the problem with living in a sauce-rich area is that at times the substance, the meal itself, gets lost under the sauces. It is an affliction that affects this area and, unfortunately, it is an affliction that affects many of the restaurants on the East End as well. Fortunately, such is not the case at The Sea Grille at Gurney's Inn in Montauk.

Since taking the helm in the Sea Grille kitchen late last season, chef Christopher Von Eissler has crafted a menu that is admirably varied, refreshingly free of pretension and firmly grounded in the notion of satisfying, indulging and, in a number of instances, truly amazing his patrons' palates. Falling in step with Gurney's history, the menu offers a bevy of Italian-inspired (though not strictly Italian) dishes that are prepared with an eye towards the ocean. The menu is well balanced, offering a variety of pasta dishes, steaks and chops, veal and chicken. There is even a section geared towards Gurney's calorie-conscious spa-goers entitled "Ship Shape," though when ordering Asian vegetable pot stickers, seared Chilean sea bass with saffron and couscous or Cajun dusted chicken with artichokes, spinach, mushrooms and tomatoes, the offerings are more likely to keep diners in "Slim Shape" rather than anything resembling a ship. For those who only count calories to help them fall asleep, the choices abound.

Perched on the bluffs overlooking the Atlantic, the dining room features floor-to-ceiling windows the length of the room for unobstructed views to the horizon. A large outdoor deck wraps around the room and it is the ultimate spot to sit down to dinner on a warm summer's night or stop in for the Sunday afternoon barbecue and a couple of beers. The atmosphere is soothing; classical music from a player piano drifts through the room and the high ceilings make conversation easy, even when the dining room is full. Welcomed graciously by maitre d' Krister, we found ourselves at a corner table just as the sunlight was beginning to fade on the western horizon and darkness was falling over the ocean.

L.A. ("You know, like Los Angeles"), our waiter, was as informative as he was amusing and he made a number of spot-on recommendations and a handful of entertaining asides while telling us about the day's specials in his lilting Jamaican accent. (He works the grill at the Sunday afternoon barbecues and while he was eminently polite and polished in the dining room, you could tell he was the sort of guy you'd want to have a beer and some ribs with on a sunny afternoon.) We opted for a bottle of Kendall Jackson Chardonnay from the lengthy wine list that includes a broad selection of whites and reds from California, France, Italy, Australia as well as a healthy selection of Long Island wines (prices from $20-$250, by the glass $5-$9) to enjoy as we were treated to some of Von Eissler's appetizers.

The best testament to the quality of the appetizers was how grudgingly we all shared our food with one another. When a dining partner has to be cajoled, tricked or outright forced to give you a sample of her dish you know that it must be good. We sampled the Gamberi Al Forno, jumbo shrimp stuffed with crab meat that were astounding, certainly one of the highlights of the meal, Cajun crab cakes, that were all the better for the bits of lobster that had found their way into the

Yes, There Is Smoked Salmon East Of Zabar's

The go-go eighties, when spec houses sprouted in the Hamptons like mushrooms after a spring rain, brought with them the demand for specialty items previously only found in the city. While there were (and still are) those that insist on bringing their goodies out with them, others sought a local source for fresh supplies. Enter Dean & Deluca in East Hampton followed closely by Barefoot Contessa. The demand had arrived.

In the middle of that decade, Bob Schepps opened the Hamptons' first bagel shop on County Road 39 in Southampton. And as bagel shop denizens everywhere know, love it or hate it, superb smoked salmon is a must. Having grown up in the "appetizing" world in Hempstead where his father owned a store, Bob, who's been hand-slicing smoked salmon and other delicacies since he was 9, knows about smoked fish.

Today, with locations in Hampton Bays, East Hampton on North Main Street and Jaegger Lane in Southampton, Hampton Bagel is a success story. And part of that success is due to Bob's fabulous, hand-sliced smoked Atlantic salmon.

"It's becoming a lost art," he said recently of his slicing talent. "Appetizing clerks used to move around to different stores – they were unionized – and everyone was always compared to Zabar's." And Zabar's, as all Manhattanites know, had been the last word on smoked fish, cheeses and specialty items. It still is. As the saying goes, some things don't change. But others do.

Appetizing stores and counters – now referred to more often as deli counters in supermarkets – along with smoked sturgeon, seem to be an endangered species. Once a thriving enterprise embraced by Eastern European immigrants, today, with "salt considered a four letter word," said Bob, the industry is shrinking.

It wasn't always so. Leonard Kriegel, author of Flying Solo, describes his father, a counterman at a Bronx appetizing store in the early part of the last century, as neither rejecting nor regretting his vocation.

"He was... as vain about working the counter rather than stocking the shelves as the full professor is vain about teaching Chaucer rather than freshman comp."

In the mid-90s, when Bob's daughter Michaal (named after her mother Joanne's younger brother, with a spelling change) was 12-years-old, he used to bring her to work with him at the Southampton store.

"We used to open Friday nights because there were no other bagel places east of Southampton in those days. We'd be there from 4 to midnight and the two of us would handle the whole store until the bakers came in at 12. I used to slice all the salmon for the two stores (the other was in Hampton Bays at that time) and then one day Michaal said to me, 'I can do that.' So I said, 'Okay, go ahead.'"

Today, if you visit the Southampton location during the week, you'll probably find Michaal there. And she has indeed learned to slice salmon as well as anyone I've ever seen. The Icelandic, farm-raised "sides" (a half of a whole fish) are smoked, without salt, in the Norwegian style. The result has a lovely, delicate flavor without the traditional saltiness.

Bob, who spends most of his time at the East Hampton store accompanied by his son, Justin, is justly proud of his success. And when you taste that hand-sliced, velvety fish, it's easy to see why. –Susan W. Simm

Rubi Red

290 Montauk Highway, East Hampton
631-907-8030

Drive by Rubi Red on Montauk Highway in East Hampton in the evening and the brightly lit red facade lures you. The warm interior with its rustic tones and massive brickhearth continue to lure. Enter the spaciious dining room and Enzo Buremil one of the proprietors, welcomes you to his "home". The completely closed off lounge to the side of the dining room is hosted by partner Salvatore Caccia.

In its second season returning patrons have acknowledged the top notch dining experience in the spacious dining room and its attentive international wait staff (the waiters are literally global) – await you. Your Mediterranean dining adventure is about to begin...

My dinner companion John and I were greeted at the entrance by Enzo and we were seated at a cozy, intimate corner table. We were presented with a basket of rolls with herb butter and a dish of black cured olives to titillate our appetites. The extensive wine list included American, Australian, French, Greek, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, and sparkling white and red wines and champagnes that range from $19 to $290 a bottle. Wines by the glass range from $6 to $18. John and I chose the Amarone Classico (Valpolicella) Ca Del Monte ($50) – a wonderful choice, indeed.

Enjoy the bread, olives and wine while you give the Mediterranean influenced menu time to decide on the delectable specialties listed.. Enzo recommended that we begin with the grilled baby calamari bathed in rosemary oil ($9). The more than generous portion was grilled to perfection – soft and tender – with extraordinary taste and texture. Beef carpaccio with fresh artichoke salad was beautifully presented and absolutely delicious. I just had to have the New Zealand clams and Prince Edward Island mussels steamed in a roasted tomato broth ($13). The fresh tomato broth was light with a slightly sweet taste so I had to dip the warm Mediterranean Rosemary flat bread ($5) into the light and slightly sweet broth but forced myself to hold back as dinner had just begun.

The next dish was one to write home about and a must try here at Rubi Red. Grilled Portobello mushroom with vegetable and mozzarella ($9). The grilled mushroom was large and tender, stuffed with slices of eggplant and topped with fresh mozzarella, unique in itself and was served hot. It was one of John's favorites.

When our entrees arrived I thought to myself, this is not dinner, it's a feast. And a feast it was. John and I shared the very special, delicious, pan seared crusted almond halibut served with Mediterranean peas puree and tomato confit ($22). The homemade tagliatelle pasta with artichoke hearts, green peas, shitake mushroom, ham and chopped tomatoes. ($18). The pasta was thin, light and so special, reminded me of home and when I raved to Enzo, he smiled lovingly and told me that this was his mom's recipe. Kudos to mom.

Every dish had its own interesting presentation that was special and unique. The menu includes brick oven appetizers, salads, and entrees, pizza, pasta and regular entrees such as chicken, shrimp, pork, veal, lamb, sausage, baked cod, and the specials of the day. Prices range from $6 to $27 from appetizers to desserts.

Dessert can be a difficult decision when you are faced with 18 selections – should I or shouldn't I? To heck with the calories, why not end the evening in complete bliss. I chose the cannoli with Sicilian cream and John had the panna cotta with berry sauce ($6.50). The dessert was accompanied by creamy cappuccino for me and freshly brewed espresso for John ended our delicious dinner.

Partner/chef Manuel Della Cruz, formely of Saent Ambrose for fifteen years, is amazing in the kitchen. He has a flair for keeping his food light and digestible,

We All Scream For Ice Cream

The history of ice cream is one mixed with all kinds of legends and myths. The discovery of ice cream has been attributed to everyone and anyone from the chef of King Charles I (to whom the monarch gave a lifetime stipend to make sure it remained a royal dessert) to Marco Polo who supposedly found ice cream on his trip to China and brought it back to Italy with the spaghetti.

In reality, there is no way of knowing how ice cream was first developed. We only know that ice cream, in all its variations, is one of the most popular desserts all around the world. But the United States is ranked first in the world in annual ice cream production, and second in per capita consumption. Only New Zealand consumes more ice cream per person than we do.

Not a big surprise when you consider how many ice cream shops there are here in the Hamptons alone. So where do you get the best ice cream around?

There is no doubt that the Ice Cream Club of Sag Harbor, located right on Main Street, is among the best ice cream shops. It's not just that the ice cream is good, which it is, but they also give you the biggest scoop. It's expensive at $3.50 a scoop, but that is including tax, and where some shops tend to go a little skimpy, the Ice Cream Club slops on as much as possible. They also use Hershey's Ice Cream for the majority of their flavors, so you know their quality and taste are top notch. The ice cream is creamier than most other places, and the service is friendly. The Club has been around for years, but the current owner, Dan Salsedo, took it over only three years ago. Unfortunately, the shop is seasonal. They are only open in the summertime.

Another great ice cream shop is the Scoop Du Jour in East Hampton, off Main Street. Their ice cream is good, but not nearly as creamy as the Ice Cream Club, and a little more solid. So if you like you ice cream a little more frozen, this is the place for you. Like the Ice Cream Club, Scoop Du Jour is also rather expensive. But, hey, this is the Hamptons, right?

If you do not feel like spending a whole lot of money on ice cream each time that summer craving hits, you can always go out and pick up an ice cream machine to make some yourself. Besides, no matter how good the ice cream may be wherever you go, what can beat a good batch of the homemade stuff? You do not necessarily need a machine, but it makes the job a whole lot easier. After getting the machine, all you need are the recipes. Here are a couple of recipes from the Ice Cream Parlor online for the most popular flavors around:

1. Chocolate: Ingredients: 2 cups of milk, 5 egg yolks, 1/4 cup sugar, 1 cup heavy cream and 3 tablespoons of cocoa.

First, boil the milk. Do not let the milk get above 175 degrees Fahrenheit. Any higher and the milk will curdle. Next, mix the egg yolks and sugar until they are thick and light. This usually takes about five minutes. Then stir in the hot milk.

Now pour the new custard back into the pot and heat gently, constantly stirring with a wooden spoon until the custard thickens slightly. Do not let the custard boil or else it will curdle.

Take the custard off the stove and add the cocoa. Then chill it until it is cold. Put the cold custard into the ice cream machine until it is slushy and add one cup of whipped cream. Make sure the cream combines thoroughly. Take everything out of the machine when it is firm.

2. Vanilla: Ingredients: 2 eggs, 3/4 cup sugar, 2 cups of heavy cream, 1 cup of milk, 2 teaspoons of vanilla extract

First, whisk the eggs in a mixing bowl until they are light and fluffy. Then slowly whisk in the sugar a little bit at a time. Continue whisking until it is completely blended. Pour in the cream, milk, and vanilla and whisk until it is blended.

Finally, put the mixture in the ice cream maker and freeze according to the instructions provided by the manufacturer.

Enjoy ice cream at home, or in town, but wherever you do, share it with a friend and be sure to grab some extra napkins.

Dining in The Hamptons

East Hampton Point

295 Three Mile Harbor Rd., East Hampton
631-329-2800

The reopening of this treasured culinary landmark, with one of the most superb water views imaginable to add to its charm, is always a matter for celebration. On this visit, a week before the season officially opens, the dining room was full of excited patrons greeting friends they had not seen since last season.

One very reassuring thing about East Hampton Point is the stability of the executive staff. Caroline Scarpinato has been there since the opening ten years ago and co-manager BJ Callaway is now in his seventh year. Shira Barzilay the other co-manager is back after having had a baby at the end of last season. Matthew Ross, their very talented executive chef, is starting his third season, together with his wife, Jenny, who is the pastry chef. John Kelly, professional waiter par excellence, has returned from helping to open the new Palms Hotel & Casino in Las Vegas. So, for all you devotees, it seems as though the first team at East Hampton Point is back and well!

Gazing over Three Mile Harbor as darkness approaches is guaranteed to relax you and Matthew Ross's new menu will keep you in that mode. His menu is not too lengthy, but is very well balanced with something for all tastes. We commenced with carrot and cilantro soup served with ginger cream and toasted hazelnuts.

The simple soup was visually attractive and had a complexity of flavor and texture resulting from the combination of carrots enhanced by cilantro and the subtle ginger cream topped by the crunchy nutty toasted hazelnuts. This was a truly excellent start to the evening and things got even better with the arrival of soft shell crabs encrusted with pistachio and served with delicate sweet corn kernels, shredded leeks and a tangy lemongrass butter sauce. Other appetizers include tuna tartare with avocado and pickled quail egg, and white asparagus with rock shrimp vinaigrette.

Our salad of baby arugula with sweet sliced pears was served with Roquefort and pecans and was everything that this salad should be, again with a wonderful blend of long lasting tastes going deep on the palate and a perfect foil to the crab's richness.

Last year Matthew served cod with a spring pea, lobster and potato ragout but this year he has decided to prepare the cod in an oriental style by glazing it with miso and serving it with snow peas, shitake mushrooms and a shiso broth. The result is a spectacular dish where the integrity of this simple but excellent fish is not compromised by the exotic accompaniments.

Matthew's love of cooking seafood dates back to the time he spent in Nantucket and Florida and his preparation demonstrates his objective of always keeping the natural flavors. Further confirming this commitment, sea scallops were also perfectly pre-and offers many desirable choices. This keeps you coming back to Rubi Red for more. The restaurant was filled almost to capacity and as I looked around I couldn't help but notice everyone smiling, sipping wine and enjoying themselves.

A new addition this season is the large candle lit "Outdoor Patio Room" enclosed in bamboo and lattice and features a raw clam bar. A nice space with a very romantic feel to it.

Rubi Red has gained an enthusiastic following and is open seven days a week, for dinner, private parties and catering and the lounge features entertainment with live music Thursday through Saturday. The restaurant accepts American Express credit cards only.

pared, seared very lightly and served over fettucini with spring peas, pearl onions and a fragrant lobster tarragon sauce. The other entrees include duck breast confit with braised cabbage and squash and braised lamb shank with asparagus and a pine nut gremolada.

Jenny sent out a selection of desserts which all looked wonderful and their looks did not belie their tastes. Lemon poppyseed angel food cake could well have made angels sing with delight and they, surely, would also appreciate the cinnamon crème brulee with caramelized bananas. Chocolate caramel tart was decadent and offset by great pistachio ice cream.

Appetizers are from $9 to $14; main courses from $22 to $28 and desserts $9. The wine list is appropriate for a restaurant of this quality with bottles starting at $32.

Over recent years East Hampton Point has built an enviable reputation and this year it should continue to be one of the best places to dine on Eastern Long Island. With the combination of the natural beauty of the surroundings, the excellent food and the very charming and professional staff, East Hampton Point is a perfect venue for romantic trysts and celebrations of all kinds. The restaurant is open for dinner every night after Memorial Day and lunch is served on Friday and Saturday and brunch on Sunday.

There will soon be something different to look forward to since East Hampton Point's owner, Ben Krupinski, has purchased the 1770 House in East Hampton and, in partnership with Caroline and BJ, is totally renovating the building and furnishing an elegant new restaurant that is scheduled to open in June. From everything heard of this project, this new restaurant with Executive Chef Kevin Penner, from Della Femina and The Star Room, is destined to be another star in the dining firmament.

dish and the Insalata Rosemarie (named for Von Eissler's mother), which was a light and flavorful combination of gorgonzola, frisee, watercress, almonds and a raspberry vinaigrette that was two degrees shy of sweet. A number of shrimp, clam and oyster dishes round out the appetizer selections ($8-$12), Gurney's famous clam chowder and a soup of the day are offered ($5) and salads available include a Caprese, an Antipasto for the Italians in the audience and a classic Caesar ($7-$9).

After a couple of minutes to catch our breath, the entrees arrived and the pleasure proceeded. The baked shrimp al la Monte is deservedly one of the house specialties. The jumbo shrimp are breaded and baked according to an old family recipe – they won't reveal the secret – and the shrimp are succulent and worth coming back for. We also tried the sea bass grilled with lemon caper butter and white wine and the delicate flavor of the fish wasn't overwhelmed. Von Eissler has designed the fish offerings so that three types of fish, salmon, tuna and sea bass (with future additions when other types of fish are in season) can be prepared Marechiare with mussels and clams in a light marinara sauce, blackened, poached, pan seared with ginger teriyaki or grilled. The approach allows for a number of dishes to suit a variety of tastes. We also tried the Vitello Marsala, thin slices of tender veal served with Marsala wine mushrooms and prosciutto di Parma that was exceptional. Other entrée options include New York sirloin steaks, a filet mignon, three chicken dishes, a Marsala, Parmigiano and Francese and a range of pastas. (Entrée prices range from $16 -$30)

Beyond full we finished with a small sample of the desserts. The key lime pie made for a nice, light finish, which leaned towards tart rather than sweet. It is worth noting that everything that comes out of the Sea Grille kitchen was made in the kitchen and, as Von Eissler noted, it is one of the only restaurants on the East End that could turn out full meals without deliveries. (Something to consider while you're sitting in traffic.)

The Sea Grille is open seven days a week for breakfast, lunch and dinner. They also offer a sunset three-course prix fixe menu for $25. The Sunday afternoon barbecue will begin in July. Live music Friday and Saturday nights. Call 668-2345. –Joshua May

In Memorium: Burial At Sea

The naval procedure for burials at sea arose out of necessity, but eventually became tradition. When a sailor was killed onboard a ship, the body had to be disposed of quickly. In those days a five-inch artillery shell was first placed between the legs of the deceased, dimes were placed on the eyes and then the body was wrapped in canvas which was tied tightly. The body would be delivered to the deck covered with the flag, which was later presented to the family, and slid down a board into the sea. This ritual is still followed today, although it is impossible for family members to be present for burials performed by the Navy since the ceremony is done while ships are out on maneuvers.

The artillery shell was required to bring the body down into the sea. Even before the military burials at sea, commercial sailing ships would have used bilge rocks for this same purpose. To ensure proper ballast these ships kept rocks stored in their holds (sometimes weighing in the tons) and would load or unload them at port depending on how much cargo they had. Piles of these bilge rocks can still be seen at older port communities such as Sag Harbor. When deaths at sea inevitably occurred, the bodies were hauled overboard tied to bilge rocks, undoubtedly with far less reverence than was later given to casualties of war.

One of the biggest misconceptions about burials at sea is the idea that the body will be floated out on a boat and set on fire. This misconception probably goes back to the ceremonies of the Vikings, who would burn bodies on small rafts. This practice has not been widely used since.

Captain Ron Pugsley of Pugboat Charters (631-728-4263, or pugboat@optimumonline.net) in Hampton Bays performs burials at sea locally. Current laws prohibit the dumping of bodies into the ocean, so most often burials are performed with ashes, or caskets filled with personal momentos although he did perform one traditional burial of a body with proper legal permission. Most often an unfired clay pot containing the ashes is dropped into the sea at the site the family selected while they watch from onboard the boat. After about five to ten feet, the ashes begin to stream out of the urn and spread through the water leaving plumes trailing behind it as it sinks. Captain Ron says that where ashes are usually dropped the water is clear with visibility up to forty feet deep.

Burials at sea make up a small percentage of Pugboat's business (a Coast Guard instructor, he specializes in boating education and does fishing charters, dinner cruises, whale watching, and real estate showing) but Captain Ron says that he does them for personal reasons. He was drafted into the army in 1970 during the Vietnam War, which led to his first experiences with military burials when he escorted bodies stateside. Captain Ron has spent the last 23 years in the Coast Guard and Coast Guard Reserves, of which he is now a member

The majority of the burials for which he is currently chartered are for World War II veterans from all branches of the military who have recently passed on. According to Captain Ron there are over 600 ships sunk off the coast of Long Island. Some of these are World War II era ships. Pugboat Charters gets requests for burials from families of veterans from all over the country who at one time or another served on one of these ships. The families want to spread the ashes of the vet over the site of his old ship. Captain Ron finds the particular wreck on his fishing charts and brings the family directly to the spot above the wreck where the ceremony is performed. He says that because of his military background and Coast Guard experience, he knows the right way to handle the burials.

While most of the burials done by Pugboat are former military personal, Captain Ron says that he also buries civilians who had a connection to the sea. He's had a family that dropped a military uniform and dog-tags on the site of a shipwreck, and one that just wanted to drop a favorite fishing rod on the site of a favorite deep-sea fishing spot in remembrance.

Making The Modern Woman

You all know her, that woman in your life who has everything together, where things just seem to work. She makes time for her daily yoga class, takes great care of her skin, eats right, is always dressed well, has a groovy job and still manages to volunteer for charities in her "spare time." She makes time to travel and read and knows how to be a true friend. But most importantly, she takes time for herself. This philosophy, the idea that all things in life should have more than one purpose, is the founding principle behind Christy Turlington's two business ventures because she is this woman.

Christy Turlington is a busy woman: model, businesswoman, fitness guru and beauty maven. She has thought long and hard about her full schedule, her personal sensibility and wellness and how to make things, down to her appearance, easier, more seamless and modern. Two core businesses that Turlington has co-founded in the past three years are the manifestation of these philosophies. The ventures are Nuala – in partnership with PUMA – and Sundari the all-natural cosmetics line which she started with partners Cavon Mahony and Ayla Hussain.

Nuala is an acronym representing Natural, Universal, Altruistic, Limitless and Authentic. The fashion line by PUMA is inspired by Turlington, the practice of yoga and Eastern philosophy and the desire among modern women to mix sport, lifestyle and personal values.

When Nuala was founded in the fall of 1998, it started with just 20 pieces. It has grown tremendously and the recent spring/summer collection titled "Momento" is carried in top stores nationwide and includes innerwear, outerwear, shoes, accessories and yoga equipment. The head designer and creative mind behing Nuala is Tina Lutz, previously of Barney's and Calvin Klein and currently of the Lutz and Patmos cashmere partnership. And part of the Fall/Winter collection entitled "Triptych Life" is the "Christy" bag, designed by Marc Jacobs with the proceeds going to benefit cancer charities. The inclusion of this piece reflects both Nuala's success in fashion and its whole-hearted commitment to altruism upon which the company was founded.

The summer collection includes fantastic pieces made from fine cotton and cashmere and made in Italy. The color schemes for each season reflect the weather and women's changing needs, with this summers colors including beautiful wave (turquoise), leaf (green), slates, pinks and whites.

Turlington's Nuala line is practically made for the Hamptons woman and Christy agreed. When I asked her which pieces she thought would be best worn by a woman at the beach this summer, she replied, "A great example of Nuala's philosophy that all things in life should serve more than one purpose, is the wearing of Nuala at the beach/in the country. A great example is our Spaghetti Tank paired with our Yoga hot pant that can double as a Tankini if worn to the beach."

Turlington's other success is in skin care and holistic healing. Inspired by the practice of yoga and the study of Eastern philosophy, Sundari in Hindi translates to mean "beautiful women." The line is an all-natural system of skin care to meet the needs of the contemporary woman while developing inner and outer beauty. Sundari is founded on the Ayurvedic healing system and the idea of restoring the holistic balance of our bodies' elements. In explaining the basic components of the line, Sundari explains that organisms are a balance of Air, Space, Water, Fire and Earth. The idea of caring about what we ingest as food should also be considered when we think about the products that we use on our skin.

Sundari's products are heavily reliant on essential oils and botanical extracts as the base ingredients. With the idea of holistic wellness gaining popularity and recognition, Sundari represents the new wave in beauty products. What people do not think about is that so many store-bought products contain chemical irritants and actually combat our bodies' natural healing properties. Sundari features extracts of rose, chamomile, lemon and cucumber. It is also one of the first product lines to advocate the use of Neem, which is the most powerful healing ingredient found in the Himalayas.

Kim Keller, the owner of Jamu, the hot new holistic spa in East Hampton, exclusively carries the Sundari line. She said, "It is amazing how much we have recently learned, that healthy skin truly equals beautiful skin." So many women spend endless time and energy trying to cover things up, like aging, our complexion and our figures. But the truth is that the more women embrace their feminity and take time for their own well being, the more beautiful they become.

Turlington is both a travel writer and a politcal activist and she has hiked Mount Kilimanjaro, writing about her experiences for the now defunct, Women's Sport and Fitness. In her travels around India and Asia, Turlington embraced Eastern philosophy and healing practices and studied then at NYU. And when you look at her total beauty, you believe that this a woman who knows what she is talking about.

A model leads a busy life, a mother of two is equally busy, a city woman-about-town cannot find enough hours in the day to get everything done, let alone take time to meditate, exercise and take care of her skin and dress well. As modern women we often feel pressure to be all things to all people, but what Turlington is trying to teach women is that one of the most important aspects of our busy schedules is to take care of ourselves. Our personal wellness, what is inside, will inevitably be reflected on the outside, manifesting in how our skin looks and how we carry ourselves.

Shop 'til You Drop...With Maria Tennariello

Well here it is, the biggie... Memorial Day Weekend. The entire Hamptons is already buzzing, getting ready for the long, hot summer and the staff at Dan's Papers will never see the light of day until after Labor Day. The shopping is unbelievable and the stores are all ready for holiday shoppers. So let's shop!

Love shopping Montauk...I happened to stop into At Home en Provence a charming French country home accents and gift shop that is surely one of Montauks hidden treasures. Located on Tuthill Road (next to Duryea's Lobster Deck), you will find more than treasures here. Look for quality merchandise such as imported and hand-made (and custom designed) table linens, glassware, dinnerware, wall art, candles, costume jewelry and new this season, women's loungewear, sandals, tote bags and designer handbags. If you are a nautical lover, there is an entire nautical section to fill your needs. Kristine, the owner told me that there is always a promotion or two going on in the store such as, buy four wineglasses and get a free bottle of wine. Great gift idea isn't it? Give her a call at 631-668-4808.

In a town where the parking lots have begun to feel like sardine cans, and village traffic is beginning to feel reminiscent of the city most people have come here to escape. Schmidt's of East Hampton on Race Lane is offering a generous solution because they really understand that people are concerned about traffic. Where you can get everything from cantaloupe to Cascade and all the fresh local produce, Schmidt's has solved the problem. They are offering free delivery on all orders over $50 and you can call ahead and it will be ready when you get there. How's that? Call them to place your order at 329-7000. Thanks George and Nina!

Second Nature Markets on Newtown Lane in East Hampton and Main Street in Southampton will have the highly anticipated Kiehl's Sunscreen Crème SPF15 in their stores this week. Lisa Blinderman the owner told me that this is one of the most popular Kiehl's products and people have been calling about it for weeks. The sunscreen in formulated to soothe all skin types as it provides protection from the suns harmful rays whether you are sunbathing, gardening or shopping.

At Mainlines on Park Place in East Hampton you will have a great time choosing great activewear for men, women and children. This is definitely a fun store to shop in.

One of my favorite antiques shop and sales features garden, porch, pool house, lawn, architecturals and much more is the Jean Sinenberg Presitge Show. It is at the Bridgehampton Community House on Montauk Highway and it is scheduled for May 30 through June 2. It's a real shopping experience.

Oh, Oh, everything must go – you know what that means! English Country Antiques Outlet on North Sea Road is clearing out the place for new merchandise. Everything must go so get going – lots of great deals here.

Has summer found its way into your closet? Luckily, all you need are a few key items to carry your wardrobe into the upcoming season. The Secret Closet on Jobs Lane in Southampton offers great looks that include the peasant/prairie influence in gauzy (my personal favorite), crochet and eyelet tops paired with bottoms that are tiered, ribboned and ruffled. Tulle, lace, and ruffles are key details are key details in your wardrobe this summer and don't forget about the one accessory, the fringed belt, it can be a single update to any wardrobe. Stop in and check this great little secret out...

Warehouse Sales are my favorites when you're really serious about furniture, rugs, and accessories. Look for one that is going on this weekend at Hampton Accent on Main Street in Southampton. You will love what you see and the prices are very affordable.

It's that time again. J. Crew Warehouse Sale at Southampton College on Montauk Highway is this weekend. The discounts are up to 70%, so now we can buy three times as much as we would have at regular prices...Oh my! I'm in trouble; I need a raise...

Always a perfect gift for any occasion is Belleek fine Parian china at The Irish Cottage on Montauk Highway in Hampton Bays. Have you seen this shop yet? It's a must see...There is something for everyone on your gift list.

The New Rules For White

The old-fashioned rule was that white couldn't be worn before Memorial Day or after Labor Day, but this year designers have broken it and made it more acceptable to wear white earlier and later. Calvin Klein, Chanel, Dolce & Gabbana, Donna Karan and Helmut Lang previewed sleek, all-white fashions in April. Now the trend goes from the runway to the streets in crisp cotton, soft linen and flowing eyelet.

Eyelet, usually featured in white fabric, is a design of small holes edged with embroidered stitches. The fabric is moving up from dust ruffles and baby pillows to dresses, camisoles, tunics and skirts. It's comfortable, romantic, airy and whimsical. Magazine fashion spreads pair eyelet with brown leather belts, turquoise earrings and necklaces, denim, and floral print skirts. These combinations keep the style from looking too monochromatic.

For a crisper, sleeker style in white, many designers feature women's suits. Calvin Klein's latest collection features a white skirt with a large white suit jacket, reminiscent of the one David Byrne wore in a 1984 Talking Heads video. White flat-front trousers make a statement with a white halter top, but many people may not feel confident enough to pull off the look. In this case, a bright red belt and matching shoes can liven up a strappy white dress, such as the eyelet one by Ralph Lauren. A handbag of a different color can also accomplish the same trick.

Another trick used to liven up a white ensemble is to mix different shades of white together. White can be differentiated through close relatives such as "chalk," "oyster," and "ivory." With the popularity of the khaki safari style and linen, there are many options in shades less than white.

Any color of accessories matches a white outfit, but it's best to keep the opposing color the same throughout the ensemble. Many of these add-ons are becoming popular in white. Coach features a variety of handbags and totes in white leather. In addition, sandals and boots also appear in white to make a monochromatic style possible. Louis Vuitton makes white go-go boots with embroidered flowers, leaves and butterflies for $4200.

One more concern about white, besides how to wear it and what to wear it with, is makeup. Makeup worn with white should be sheer and minimal. Blushes to wear are pink and peach, lipstick is pastel and glossy, and eye shadow is in creamy shades of blue, lilac and pink. Lucky magazine recommends L'Oreal Translucide Sheer Blush in "Blushing Glow," Neutrogena MoistureShine Gloss in "Whisper," and Illuminance Crème Shadow in "Love Her Madly." Light makeup in pastel shades give a healthy glow against white fabric. In a similar fashion, hair should be kept loose, smooth and simple.

Although these new rules about wearing white are specific, there are a lot more choices. We can choose freely among fabrics, shades and accessories that will help the style last long after September. Now that white is back in the spotlight, wearing it has gotten a whole lot simpler.

CLASSIC CARS BY BOB GELBER

Free Cars

One of the many reasons I've acquired a knowledge of all things automotive is that over the years, through people and circumstance, I've driven hundreds of wonderful and exciting cars. It all started when I was a senior in high school, with a newly minted driver's license. On many weekends, my high school buddy, Dick Roth, and I would drive up to visit Bob Grossman's Foreign Cars of Noyack. In those days, Grossman was not only one of America's leading importer of exotic cars, but also a world famous race driver. Grossman always had a varied selection of new and used exotic cars on his lot.

As a drooling fixture virtually every weekend, I eventually became friendly with Grossman... to the point that he would let me test drive any exotic car he had available. I'm not talking MGA's here. I vividly remember Bob handing me the keys to a Ferrari Short Wheelbase Berlinetta and telling me to have a good time. Then there was the 427 Cobra, the Maserati, etc. Today, these cars are multi-million dollar collectibles, but in those days, even though expensive, they were just looked upon as used sports cars. I'll always owe the gracious Bob Grossman many thanks for introducing me to the joy of driving the greatest cars of the period.

In the late '60s and early '70s I worked in Manhattan, and my daily ride was a 1951 Ford Woody Station Wagon. However, a fellow named Jeremy Feld was an importer of Italian oddities like the Intermeccia line of cars as well as the Murena Station Wagon. He was another buddy. Jeremy had a garage on the West Side as well as a grand collection of vintage Bentleys, which were parked in the garage and, "at my disposal, any time." Often I would take out one of the old Bentleys, (usually a 1936 sports sedan) and use it locally. It's amazing how dependable and easy to drive these old Bentleys were. In fact, one of Jeremy's cars was a 1929 Bentley two-seat convertible, which I loaned Bert Stern to use in a Revlon commercial. The female star of the commercial was Lauren Hutton. Lauren couldn't drive a stick shift, and since the scene was of her driving the Bentley down a country road, I had to teach her to drive the car. The car was a brute of a machine, and a bear to drive. In other words, a handful. Because of this, we decided that I should hide in the car and help Lauren drive the thing. I hid on the floorboards, under the dashboard, shouting directions and shifting for Lauren as she drove.

Working in the film business for many years, I drove many interesting cars. For ten weeks I had at my disposal a super restored 1941 Lincoln Continental, which was the starring car in the mini series Seventh Avenue. This was a car of such beauty and immense presence, that even NY cabbies gave it a wide berth when in heavy midtown traffic.

For a month I was given the pleasure of driving a 1966 Ferrari 4-cam GTB coupe around Manhattan. At any speed. It seems I ended up being Walter Matthau's double in all of the driving sequences in Elaine May's first film, A New Leaf. Several scenes had me driving down Fifth Avenue with bursts of over 100 miles per hour.

I wrote and produced commercials for Hertz Rent-A-Car when they had what was called their "Sports Car Club" in the late '60s. They rented XK-Es, Shelby GT-350s, Triumph TR-6s and Volvo P-1800 coupes. Of course any of these cars, when available, were at my disposal. The XK-E was my favorite because the GT-350 was just too brutal and hard riding for the streets of Manhattan.

I lived in the Hamptons when my son was born 26 years ago. The day my wife went into labor, we just happened to have one of Kojak's (from the TV series) police cars in my driveway. My wife's doctor and hospital were in Manhattan. We jumped into the police car, and with lights flashing, drove to NY on the LIE at indecent speeds.

I taught Sylvester Stallone how to drive a Model T-Ford which he used in a film called Paradise Alley. This was the film he made after the Rocky series movies. Matt Dillon needed to learn the workings of a Ford GT-40 race car. Both the Model T and GT-40 are super cars to drive.

Over the years, I've owned, borrowed and driven hundreds of different cars both on the race courses and roads around the world. Obviously, I have my favorites, but all were a learning experience, both good and bad. So many cars, so many speed limits, so little time.

Bob Gelber, an automotive journalist living in the Hamptons, appears regularly on television as an automotive expert. You can email him atremsenburg@aol.com

Summer Fun

I Want to Ride My Bicycle, I Want to Ride My Bike...

Some people say that the best way to get to know your city or town is by riding through it on a bicycle. Luckily, the Hamptons are a bike friendly area, with plenty of places to see around town, on road and off, and lots of trails to ride upon along the way.

If you do not own a bike and are looking to rent, there are more than a few places you can go no matter what part of the East End you may be on. Bike Hampton in Sag Harbor and the Montauk Bike Shop in Montauk are the best places to find what you are looking for. Not only do they have decent renting rates, but they will also help you find great places to take your new toy. They will even take you there and guide you through the ride personally.

At Bike Hampton they rent bikes by the hour or by the day. For a regular hybrid, a mixed mountain and road bike, you will pay $30 for 24 hours, or $10 for the first hour and $6 for each one following. A mountain bike will be slightly more, but if you plan on taking it off-road it is worth the extra dough.

The Montauk Bike Shop is a little cheaper, with rentals starting at $6 or $8 per hour for road bikes, and $7 or $9 per hour for off roads. For 24 hours, the bikes will cost $29 or $49, and $39 or $49 respectively.

Both places organize tours for their patrons or anyone else interested in riding along a trail. You do not have to rent or buy your bikes there to take advantage of the rides they offer. But, if you would rather not go on an organized ride, they will suggest a couple of places for you to check out on your own. The organized rides, however, are better for anyone who has not gone along the trail before, or does not have much experience on trails, because the guides know all of the trails well, and can lead you in the best directions, or even just the correct one. They can also usually help with any small problems that may happen to your bike along they way.

All the tours with Bike Hampton are free and no appointment is necessary. They have group mountain rides on the Yellow Trail right off route 114 between Sag Harbor and East Hampton every Wednesday evening at six, so just show up if you are interested. The ride usually takes about two hours. They also have group road rides every Saturday and Sunday mornings at seven. The Yellow Trail ride is for beginner to intermediate riders, but the road ride is for riders of all levels. Both rides are conducted all year round.

For rides guided by The Montauk Bike Shop, go to their website at www.montaukbikeshop.com. Their site is very much still under construction, but it will tell you everything you need to know about their organized rides; where they go, what they do, when they are and how long they will last; they can go for anywhere from one to eight hours depending on your level of expertise and commitment. The website will also give you general information about the store and what they have inside.

If you still want to go it on your own, East Hampton offers arguably some of the best off-road terrain along the eastern seaboard. It is beautiful and exciting and a must-see for any riding enthusiast. Most stores offer something in the way of trail maps for anyone who does not know the area. Unfortunately, they are not free; guides cost approximately $6 at most stores.

The "Ride Guide" is a specific, pocket-sized guide you will find at the Montauk Bike Shop. It is one of the most extensive guides you will find about the area, and they have them for bikers as well as hikers, though which one you buy is generally insignificant; the trails are pretty much the same.

The guides are good not just because they can lead you through some of East Hampton's more popular trails, like Hither Woods, Northwest/Fosters Path, Millers Ground and Paumanok Path, but because they also give you a very extensive look at the trails. Not only do they color code the trails so you know which one you are on, but they also show you everything from the topography of the area you are in and the mileage you will be traveling, to where you should park your car and any historical information that might interest you about the grounds, like, according the Montauk Bike Shop, where the Amistad washed ashore at Fort Pond Bay in 1839.

The only major drawback about the guide is... they are about East Hampton's more popular trails, so don't expect to be alone. Otherwise, happy trails.

The Dan's Papers They Made The Movie Here Film Festival Spring 2002

Grey Gardens

The final presentation of this season's Dan's Papers' FREE Film Festival of "Movies Made Here" takes place this Saturday, May 25, at Southampton College at 2 p.m. The film is the haunting Grey Gardens, a documentary style, all-too-intimate portrait of Big Edie and Little Edie, otherwise known as Edith Bouvier Beale and her daughter, Edie. The film, made by brothers David and Albert Maysles in 1974, and released in 1976, made cult figures of Big Edith, then 70, and Little Edie, then 56, partly because they were the aunt and first cousin to Jacqueline Onassis, but mostly because the two were extraordinary women with a complex relationship to the outside world and themselves. Their controversial, seemingly impoverished life, as seen in the Maysles' film, portrayed them as antisocial, near hermit-like, with an odd style of living in a decayed crumbling, branch and vine entwined one-time mansion, built before the turn of the century on Apaquogue Road in East Hampton.

In 1923, Edith and Phelan Beale bought the house and 4-acre estate with impressive grounds designed by the previous owner, noted gardener, Anna Gilman Hill, who named it Grey Gardens. The Beales separated three years after the purchase of the place, but Edie continued to summer at Grey Gardens. With the deaths of her ex-husband and father in 1956 and 1957, Edith lost her income and she and Little Edie moved into the house full time. As the impoverished years passed, the two complicated women lived a life so intricately intertwined and self-sheltering as the bushes outdoors, it is easy to realize how oblivious they could become to the world outside and the changes taking place within the house. Outdoors, the uncut, towering hedges and strangling vines enveloped the good lines of the J.G. Thorp designed house and hid the shame of its neglect.

Big Edie, a woman described superficially as "eccentric", had a strong willfulness of purpose, which just did not fit in with the manners of the LVIS (Ladies Village Improvement Society), who didn't call themselves that for naught. As a matter of fact, following the release of the Maysles' Grey Gardens, the LVIS would not allow it to be screened anywhere in town and cited complaints to town officials. Soon after, the Suffolk Board of Health investigated the house and up went an unexpected hullabaloo, and, I'm sure, to the vexing displeasure of the LVIS, Grey Gardens and the occupants, including many, many un-housebroken cats and a few raccoons, became famous – practically worldwide. Niece, Jacqueline and husband, Ari, got renovations going and supplied a new roof, plumbing, heating and the building began anew. Soon after that, Big Edie died.

"Big" Edie was just that – big – big in life and as life. Big in cantankerous individually. She loved to sing... anywhere! Little Edie, too, loved to sing and dance and was a libertine, heady individual, self determined to idiomatic style in dress, morals and personality. Both were tough as nails and as soft as creamy cheesecake, and so, what you may perceive as aberrational behavior will melt like ice cream and become endearing.

The Maysles with Ellen Hovde, Muffie Meyer, and Susan Froemke, give you a rather thick slice of their life. What they and their cameras saw, and what they put together is what you get. It is terrifyingly amusing, embarrassing and recoilsome, tender, dramatic and always engrossing and involving. You are permitted into a very private world and time with two women who are willing, and at times, anxious to engage you. Sometimes their openness is extremely poignant and they create a poetic fantasy.

Remember, however, GREY GARDENS, is just a slice of their lives – a momentary period without a past or sub text, only a great presence. To this extent, the film could be unfair. This is why I've given a little background here. Beyond this, there is the wide, wide lifetime that formed these women. You will have to fill in the chasm – write your own scenario, so to speak. It might be up there with Tennessee Williams. Maybe this is one of the film's greatest assets.

Following the screening, for the discussion period, we are pleased to have Lois Wright as a guest to speak with the audience. She was a close friend of the two Edies and appears in the film. Ms. Wright will help light up some of the darker aspects of the rich psychological implications of the film. She lived with them for a time in Grey Gardens and was with Big Edie at the time of her death, just two years after the film's release. Lois Wright paints, writes and has a chat show at LTV Studios, seen on Channel 70. Many of her paintings can be seen in the film. She has so many things to tell you, some of which she has shared with me.

This series is hosted by me, Guy-Jean de Fraumeni, and I am especially pleased to recommend this film; it is a memorable experience. With me is Sarah Halsey and the place is Chancellor's Hall at the main parking lot. Refreshments are served.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer / writer / director of award winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

Star Wars, Unfaithful

The mythic, mass-market, moviemaker, mogul and, mass serial-killer, George Lucas, re-entered the Summer Blockbuster arena with yet another chapter in his ongoing , projected six-part, epic serial Star Wars. Episode 11 - Attack of the Clones , says it all. Lucas has resuscitated another clone attacking it with all the force of his Captain Billy Whiz-Bang, skywalking, special effects army but surrendering the director's job of animating his actors. The neon tube swords still swish with a flair, but the shiny glow, however, has dimmed on the heroic halos of the Jedi Space Politicos rivaling for Universal (or 20th Century Fox) dominance. The current installment is a bit more serious (for those who take this seriously and many do), but the groaner funnies are there, even as little Anakin grows up and in this universe of good and evil, grows older and bad and becomes known as Darth Vader, a maggotty looking villan, under a large black helmet and a star of the first Star Wars(1977) with the dramatic voice of James Earl Jones. Those were the good ol', gee whiz days when genealogy, chronology, reference notes and "seriousness," were summarized in a printed crawl that zoomed out into infinity, recreating another 1930s serial standby of the sort that inspired Lucas. It's a shame, that, somewhere, he has lost the pre-requisite of the early serials – the cliff hanger that had you eagerly awaiting the next chapter.

Another thing the ol' Star Wars had was the sexy business of Han Solo and Princess Leia. Very business-like and sexy over-the-counter, Unfaithful, a surprisingly strong film that takes Hollywood lovemaking out of the usual trash-for-cash, market-value category and places it, uncomfortably, into the moralistic quid pro quo, pay back for pleasurable services received. Extra marital sex is brought to a climax extremus, putting a modern exclamation point resolution to Noel Coward's 1945, Brief Encounter, wherein a perfectly happy wife gets caught up in a "fling". The 1940's premise,which is poignantly indelible, takes on high-fired intensity in our new no-holds-barred times. And, this movie comes to grips with the subject, especially as handled by its star, Diane Lane, giving one of those once-in-a-lifetime performances, as directed by Adrian Lyne, who made Fatal Attraction, fatally memorable. A good, grown-up script makes no excuses for adultery but creates a revelatory ritual marriage (to Richard Gere) duel of consciences. Don't sit too close to the screen. It's catching.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/ writer/ director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

theatre review: a letter from ethel kennedy... by barry gordin

It is poignant when a playwright doesn't live to see his work produced, but with A Letter From Ethel Kennedy it is perhaps especially so. The autobiographical drama by Christopher Gorman opened for a limited run in New York. Mr. Gorman's dream was to have it staged with Joanna Gleason directing and his dear friend, Anita Gillette, starring. This then is the playwright's posthumous dream.

The details of this funny bittersweet story about a gay forty-something man with AIDS are taken directly from Mr. Gorman's brief life. All the action takes place in a restaurant in the theatre district of New York City. The play suffers from the claustrophobic atmosphere of being played at a table, where the characters remain most of the time. The first act would probably be better set in the authors apartment, which could have easily been accomplished. However, the actor's and the director make the most of the situation and find many wonderful moments within the tender script and confined setting.

Ms. Gillette plays the author's mother (Bridget) and is particularly moving and funny. She is an accomplished actress bringing wit, charm and a wise maturity to the role as she transforms from somewhat ditsy spirit to knowing soul. As the father (Jimmy), Berni Mc Inerney is also good. He has a strident urgency which underlines his difficulty in expressing his inner truths to his son. As their son Kit, Jay Goede has the most challenging role and manages well despite the difficulties. Stephen Barker Turner plays his narcissistic lover, Matthew and is also competent. Randy Harrison, of Showtime's Queer as Folk fame, is pleasant on the eye as the waiter, but only displays a variation of his Showtime character.

Jeff Cowie's restaurant setting with a bar in the background is excellent and realistic evoking the little hideaways in the theatre district.

HANGIN' WITH GEORGE CAN GET YOU INTO HOT WATER.

All I know is, awhile ago, I went into Kazdin Pools & Spas for some pool chemicals.

While wandering around the store, waiting my turn, this charming guy with a big red mustache starts a whole conversation with me about the benefits of spas.

The next thing I know, he's taking me somewhere in his car.

We get to this place (he says its his home).

In the back yard are a woman, two young girls and a Golden Retreiver, (mustache says, his wife & daughters; won't tell me who the retreiver is) in this beautiful steaming bubbling contraption.

Anyway, they invited me into it.

It was wonderful.

Every muscle relaxed. The tension in my body disappeared.

I haven't felt this good in years.

It's been about three weeks that I'm here. And, I know these people would like all of us (we're now 47) to buy our own spas and go home.

But, they're too polite to ask.

One of us even overheard the guy in the mustache tell his wife that someone named Marquis said "George, maybe you should just have a sale."

ENTERTAINMENT IN THE HAMPTONS

East Village Meets East End At The Star Room

Looking for something to do different this summer? Start off your weekend early with a little East Village on the East End. Every Thursday night, The Star Room in Wainscott, will have a show to knock your socks off. Rouge, The New Bohemia Cabaret, presented by Epicurean Events, brings a new twist to the Hamptons. It is certainly not your typical night out.

The shows will include Luxury Lex singing tunes ranging from the Beatles' Michelle to show tunes, including Caberet. He can belt out a song and turn the room into a Broadway stage. Lex's sense of humor alone will keep the show going strong. Another performer, Nicole Renaud, adds her own shy style to the performances. She is a Parisian songbird who at one time recorded with Dee-lite and was trained at a conservatory run by Mireille, the foremost cabaret star in Paris. She sleeks into the room with an accordion strapped on and truly captivates the audience. Singing songs old and new, from French movies and some original scores, she makes you want to hop on a plane and visit the Eiffel Tower.

Did somebody say Diva? My personal favorite was "The World Famous Bob," who, believe me is all woman. I have never seen anyone make a Martini, shaken not stirred, in quite that way before. Lets just say leave the kids at home. She also showed her softer side as a half naked, all-American, candy striper. She is the definition of a true blonde bombshell. The World Famous Bob, has been seen in over 20 national magazines, including a six page layout in the October issue of Mode. You may have caught her in some independent films associated with John Waters. Resembling a twenty-first century Marilyn Monroe, Bob is an act you have to catch. There will be many more performers throughout the summer, including some flying trapeze artists. Now that I'd love to see! Meryl Lady Finger who palyed Cha-Cha Digregorio in the national tour of Grease is also scheduled to appear. Much credit must be given to Patrick Bonomo producer of Epicurean Events, who realized that the world needed a good laugh right now. He finds most of the talent in the East Village, the Lower East Side and in Brooklyn at nightclubs and lounges. Patrick wants Rouge to capture the need to be carefree that lies deep within all of us. The Star Room has given us a new and hilarious way to spend our Thursday evenings this summer. The doors open at 10 p.m., shows start at around 11 p.m. For more information you can call Patrick at 324-3727.

Uzi Hitman is one of Israel's foremost musical composers, lyricists, vocalists and television personalities, according to critics. He will be performing at the Berman Sanctuary on Sunday May 26th at 7:30 PM as part of a community wide concert in support of Israel, sponsored by The Hampton Synagogue in Westhampton Beach.

With a name like Uzi Hitman You may have expected to be more like the soldier standing guard on the border between Israel and the West Bank, but Hitman has actually written more than 600 songs in his career. Many artists around the world sing his songs and play his music. In fact, his songs are so ingrained in Jewish culture, they have become virtual "classics" that transcend nationalities. They have almost become a matter of folklore and many people do not even realize how many songs they sing that were actually written by him. Songs like "Adon Olom" are often sung by Yeshiva school children around the globe, but there are few people who know that he composed the popular music for that song.

Admission to the concert is free. The Consul General of Israel to New York, Ambassador Alon Pinkas, will be speaking at the concert as well, on behalf of the State of Israel.

Following the concert will be a reception in the Edelstein Hall of the Kaylie Center. Call The Hampton Synagogue for reservations, 631-288-0534. –B.Z.

Single In The Hamptons

An out-of-work actor, a socialite/heiress, a celebrity photographer, a millionaire playboy, a fashion journalist and a club owner walk into a bar. The out-of-work actor orders whatever anyone will buy for him, the socialite/heiress orders a chardonnay, the celebrity photographer has a camera in his hands so he doesn't get anything, the millionaire playboy gets a lot, the fashion journalist goes for champagne and the club owner gets whatever he wants. And so after they get their drinks the bartender says... well, the bartender doesn't say anything, because this isn't a joke, but the above collection of characters is the focus of a four part series, "Single in the Hamptons," that will air on WE (Women's Entertainment) on Sundays in June.

The series is an often amusing look at the Hamptons that includes the requisite shots of beachfront mansions, expensive cars, trendy spots filled with trendy people and the pursuit of love and happiness on the always entertaining East End. The London-based production company, September International, that shot the documentary for WE chose an eclectic group of singles who afford us the opportunity to glimpse into many different sides of the raucous and occasionally outrageous Hamptons' singles scene. The socialite/heiress wouldn't be caught dead at the millionaire playboy's house and the inverse is probably true as well. (It would be a great premise for a new sitcom though.)

The cast of characters includes: Andrew Sasson, owner of the uber-trendy clubs, Jet East and Conscience Point; Patrick McMullan, celebrity photographer, who hits all the big parties; Majorie Gubelman the socialite who frets over seating arrangements for dinner parties and necklaces worth six figures; Daniel Reton, out of work actor who loves the camera, himself and any girl he can get his hands on; Susie Redstone, fashion journalist and man hunter; and Ivan Wilzig, millionaire playboy with a castle and a harem.

The group is followed from Memorial Day to Labor Day, the singles are often amusing, consistently entertaining, obsessively ostentatious and occasionally shocking. But what would the Hamptons be without amusement, entertainment, ostentation and shock? The Jersey Shore. Better still, if you spent anytime partying in the Hamptons last summer, you should catch the series because you just may catch a glimpse of yourself out, about and behaving badly.

"Single in the Hamptons" airs on WE (Women's Entertainment) Sundays at 10 p.m. June 2, 9, 16 and 23.

"JOURNEY THROUGH MEXICO" AT GUILD HALL

Winner of "Best in Show" last year for Guild Hall's Members' exhibit, Walter Schwab has mounted a photographic essay celebrating Mexico (particularly Oaxaca, San Miquel de Allende, Guanajuato, Acapulco and Queretaro). Despite the fact that each place has its own distinct traits, Mr. Schwab does not emphasize the differences. The only photo that can be clearly identified with a particular area is a costumed figure from a Dawn of the Dead parade (originating in Oaxaca, we presume).

But that may be one of Mr. Schwab's points: to show similarities and commonalities among the Mexican people, regardless of regional culture and geography. This demeanor alone can establish the idea of universality which is another salient factor at work.

However, Mr. Schwab uses other ways to establish such a concept. For example, many figures do not face the camera, but are caught with their backs to us or in profile thus establishing a pattern which is more than coincidental. Mr. Schwab's signature photograph of a man in profile covered with a grease-like substance provides a good example of this conceptualization.

(Another critical interpretation of this stance also suggests that we cannot truly know the Mexican people, although this may be "reading" too much into the images.)

While universality seems to be a theme, Mr. Schwab's closeups seemingly contradict this idea, where concrete details make images more specific. Even so, the closeups do not define a special moment or place. They serve as both symbols (shots of crosses and a Star of David are arresting exceptions) and metaphors (decaying paint on walls) for an entire culture.

However, closeups convey more than merely concrete, frozen moments. Mr. Schwab's camera captures a woman in the street, her arm appearing as a diffused gesture. This time, the intimate image suggests a society's passion.

Clearly not a travelogue but a "journey" instead, this exhibit avoids the usual images of Mexico, often stressing the dynamics between life and death. Moreover, the photographs' arrangement and thematic thrust make the presentation an essay rather than simply a collection of individual images.

"Journey Through Mexico" at East Hampton's Guild Hall will be on view until June 6.

This touching story concerns a dying gay man's need to reconcile with his parents and a former lover. The author, a former TV executive, has fashioned an amusing tale in three acts, which plays out quickly and is slyly entertaining. There are numerous inside jokes about the business and AA displaying a keen ear for comedic dialogue which he uses to good effect. What Gorman seems to be saying, is that our desire for love is what drives us all, and we all have difficulties in expressing that need. In the end we have only our gifts, what we have done with them and ourselves.

Hello, hello, hello. It's great to be back covering the entertainment and benefit scene on the East End. There is a lot going on this Memorial Day weekend. Here are some highlights: Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre opens with Lanford Wilson's Pulitzer Prize-winning play Talley's Folly; political satirist Mort Sahl is the inaugural star of the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center's summer season; and East Hampton's Guild Hall invites the entire community to a reception for its current exhibit, "Guild Hall Collects: Artist of Hamptons Bohemia" including co-authors Helen Harrison and Constance Denne with their fast-selling new book Hamptons Bohemia.

As for interesting benefits and events – there's the Hamptons Concours d'Elegance, a three-day classic auto exhibition and auction with luncheon/fashion show for the Carol M. Baldwin Breast Cancer Research Fund in Bridgehampton; Dan's Papers' 24th (!) Potatohampton Minithon (for the National Multiple Sclerosis Society) runs rain-or-shine from Bridgehampton on Saturday morning; and Miracle House, the only New York organization offering affordable housing and support services for families affected by AIDS and cancer, has a Saturday cocktail party/auction in Bridgehampton.

THEATER

Bay Street Theatre's first offering of the summer season is Lanford Wilson's romantic comedy Talley's Folly. It won the Pulitzer Prize in 1980. The play, starring Matthew Arkin and Jessica Hecht, runs Tuesdays to Sundays through June 9. For tickets ($36-60), call the box office at (631) 725-9500 or visit the website, www.baystreet.org. Next Tues., May 28, is "TalkBack" night where audience members can stay after the performance and talk with the actors about the play. There are also family nights, singles nights and gay & lesbian nights during the run.

Mort Sahl, the legendary political satirist, will be stirring things up at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on Saturday, 8:30 p.m. For tickets, call the WHBPAC box office at (631) 288-1500.

Montauk Theatre Productions, along with its sister Shooting Star Theater at the South Street Seaport, has a busy season at both venues. Plans for this weekend were still in formation at press time, so call them at (631) 668-5656.

MUSIC

Jim Turner, one of the most versatile "local" musicians, will be at the John Drew Theater, Guild Hall, with his band for an 8 p.m. concert on Friday, May 24. Tickets ($15-20) are available at the East Hampton box office, (631) 324-4050.

The leading music club here is Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse. This weekend's headliners include the rock/pop/jazz/r&b harmonies of Rockapella on Friday (7:30 p.m.) followed by surf guitar master Dick Dale (9:30) and then popular local performer Nancy Atlas (11). On Saturday, the hit rock group Little Feat (8 p.m.) is followed by rising local songstress Dana Fuchs (10). Sunday and Monday, the 8 p.m. show is folksinger/guitarist Martin Sexton, then guitarist/songwriter Dave Edmunds on Tuesday. For tickets and reservations at this small, intimate space, call (631) 267-3117 or log on to the website www.stephentalkhouse.com.

Some of the best restaurants and clubs for good listening and/or dancing music this weekend are: Star Room, Wainscott (formerly The Swamp and Club Swa); Todd Michaels on piano at the Maidstone Arms, East Hampton (Sat.), pop standards and soft jazz with songstress Stephanie Cardinali and the Paul Gene trio (Thurs. at East Hampton's Turtle Crossing, Fri. at Wainscott's Rubi Red, Sat. at Napeague's Ocean Grillfish, Sun. brunch at Bridgehampton's World Pie); soft jazz and pop classics played by the Jim Demitrack Trio at Kipling's, Bridgehampton; and a variety of interesting musicians at Bridgehampton's Wild Rose Cafe including rock and rockabilly from The Lone Sharks (call 537-5050 for this week's roster).

FILM

The Dan's Papers' spring "They Made the Movies Here" series concludes this Saturday, 2 p.m., with a screening of Grey Gardens. The showing is in the Duke Lecture Room, Chancellor's Hall, at Southampton College and there is no charge but seating is limited, so please call (631) 537-0500 to reserve space.

SPEAKERS

Well-known author James Brady will speak about his latest book, Warning of War, at BookHampton, East Hampton, on Saturday at 5:30 p.m. On Sunday at the same time and place, best-selling suspense novelist Lisa Scottoline will speak about her new tome Courting Trouble. At Canio's Books, Sag Harbor, popular local poets Star Black and Bill Knott will read at 6 p.m.

BENEFITS AND SPECIAL EVENTS

The Hamptons Concours d'Elegance, an exhibition and auction of classic cars, begins Friday with a preview day ($5 admission) and a bidders' cocktail party from 6 to 8 p.m. ($35 admission goes to the Timothy Hill Children's Ranch in Riverhead). The site is the Hampton Classic fairgrounds on Snake Hollow Rd, Bridgehampton, just off Montauk Highway. The auto exhibition continues on Saturday morning and the auction is Saturday afternoon. Sunday is the last chance to view the cars and there is a benefit cocktail party (12:30 p.m.) and luncheon/fashion show (1:30 p.m.) for the Carol M. Baldwin Breast Cancer Research Fund. Miracle House has two events planned for Saturday. At 6 p.m., there's a cocktail party and silent auction of luxury items at Nova's Ark, 60 Millstone Rd., Bridgehampton (off Scuttlehole Rd.) – $140 donation required. Starting at 10 p.m., DJ Monty Q from Miami spins hot sounds until the wee hours at the Pinewood West Studios soundstage off Industrial Rd. in Wainscott. Admission to this party is a $75 donation (there's a cash bar).

Guild Hall, East Hampton's revered cultural center, invites the public at 6 p.m. to a reception for "Guild Hall Collects: Artists of Hamptons Bohemia," its current exhibition featuring art from the late 1800s through the 1950s – when the Hamptons became an artists' and writers' haven. Beyond Organics: Flower Seed The Right Start Ever stop to think how vastly different the flower seeds you plant are? Some, like petunias, are dust-like; others are large and easily handled. Some need special attention, while others can be sown outdoors with care.

You first need to determine whether seeds can be sown directly in the flowerbeds or whether they should be given an indoor jump on the season. Snapdragons, asters, verbenas and double-flowered petunias must make considerate growth before flowering. Since this growth is rather slow, a backward extension of the growing season into late winter is of definite benefit in obtaining an early and long blooming season in the flower garden.

Extremely fine seeds, such as petunias, are best started indoors because of the difficulties with their size. Tender seeds, which also require a long period in the soil to germinate, benefit from the controlled indoor conditions. Though such easily handled, fast-growing flowers like marigolds and zinnias do not actually require an early start, they too will be helped from an indoor planting.

One group, however, should not be planted indoors. The hardy annuals; larkspur, bachelor's buttons, clarkia and California poppy, should be sown directly in the garden as soon as the soil can be worked. They require a long cool period in order to break dormancy and obtain maximum percentage of germination.

Although most seeds germinate best at about 70 degrees, the seedlings should not be subjected to a higher temperature, and there should be a 15 to 20 degree drop at night. Warm weather plants grow slowly at these temperatures, but will produce the sturdy plants desired for transplanting outdoors. Higher temperatures coupled with a low light level indoors produce tall, spindly plants not equipped to withstand weather conditions in the open garden.

Perhaps the most common mistake with getting a jump on the outdoor season is attempting to extend it too far backward. In a greenhouse, with proper conditions and plenty of space, there are no complications since the plants can be successfully grown to full size if necessary. In your house, the combined effects of heat, poor light, and lack of space can easily lead to disaster.

When to start seeds can be determined by the length of time required for germination, rate of growth, and the earliest date that the plants can be set outdoors. The general rule is to start seeds about six weeks before the safe outdoor planting date. Slow-growing species do better with as many as ten weeks of indoor growth, while rapid growers are best with only four weeks.

With all seeds, wherever they are sown, the critical factor is always moisture. Once seeds have been subjected to moisture, they must be allowed to become dry again. For maximum results with the least attention, the containers of soil should be set in a situation just warm enough for germination and covered with a sheet of clear plastic or glass to conserve moisture. It is equally important to watch for the first sign of germination, immediately removing the cover and bringing the seedlings to strong light.

Seedlings grown indoors, even with the recommended cool temperature, are not equipped to withstand a sudden transfer to outdoor conditions. They must be gradually hardened-off, either in a cold frame, or by setting them in some sheltered location outdoors during the day and when mild weather is expected at night. After a week or ten days of this treatment, they will be ready for their permanent place in the garden.

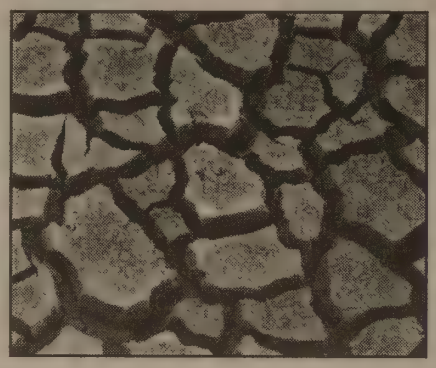
EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

Last week a number of media sources called regarding the cold, wet weather we've been having over the last month. To answer the question, is the draught over? My reply is no, not yet. A draught is a long-term problem that requires a long-term solution. The draught took nearly a year to cause concern, in some areas depending on the reservoir. It will take a number of months of sufficient rainfall to get us back to normal. The news on CBS radio this morning claimed that 2" of rain fell over the metropolitan area and Long Island last weekend. It was a cold, steady, heavy rain event that caused us to stay in on Saturday. We have enough rain for a while, at least as far as the farmers are concerned. We need sun, warm temperatures and some wind to dry it up for fieldwork. The "draught" is not yet over but conditions are getting better. New York City reservoirs are still down from 100% (normal in spring) to 76% or so. We have a ways to go to call the draught over with.



The main topic for this week is the passage of the State budget late Thursday. I had to travel to Albany for several meetings Thursday and Friday. So I stopped at the legislative chambers of the Senate and Assembly. The Assembly had finished their votes at about 3 p.m. on the series of budget bills. The Senate was scheduled to finish by the evening. The State budget is many telephone books thick and very complicated. There are legislative bills with language to spell it out, plus the actual numbers of departmental bills, member items, etc. I'm no expert in interpretation, but I was able to figure out that overall the ag portion of the budget was pretty good. The New York State Wine and Grape Foundation received $662,000; they asked for $1 million. Several important programs for us came out of the Environmental Protection Fund including the Farmland Preservation Program funding at $16 million. That was a higher number than we had anticipated. Funding for reimbursement for Soil and Water Districts was $3.7 million, which restored funding for last year and this year. Non Point Source Pollution funding was $5.5 million for last year and $6 million for this year for implementation of AEM, a stewardship program for farming. These things are very important to New York agriculture. Senator LaValle, our champion on the East End provided $100,000 in new funding for the East End Institute for a variety of local programs.

There were also tax relief provisions that we haven't figured out yet. Also, several fee increases. One in particular was a big increase for commercial pesticide applicators, but private (farmers) held constant. The new fee increases will help DEC to review registrations more efficiently which will help get the newer, environmentally safer materials into the farmers' hands.

The State budget process is subject to much criticism because of how the leadership, Governor, Senate Majority Leader and Speaker of the Assembly came together for the final agreement. But make no mistake, all the legislators, government agencies and advocacy groups play a role in making it happen. We live in a state with 18 million or so special interests. It's difficult to please everyone and every cause. Our legislators fight for their districts (parochial responsibility) and for the greater good (statewide responsibility). Overall they do a good job.

How Does An Air Conditioner Work?

Birds singing, the crash of waves on the beach, the distant roar of lawnmowers and the gentle hum of air conditioners – oh, the sweet sounds of summer. With June just around the corner and the dead of summer close on its heels, it's getting to be the time of year that firewood is replaced by charcoal for the grill and the oil/gas burner is supplanted by the air conditioner. Like magic, an air conditioner can turn the most miserably sweltering of August days into a relaxing, sweat-free experience, but how do they actually work?

It's all about the freon. In essence, an air conditioner turns your home or office into a refrigerator. It's a pretty simple system comprised of two sections of aluminum tubing, two fans, a compressor and an expansion valve. Put them together properly and instant cool air. The compressor takes cool freon gas and compresses it to make it very hot so that as it passes through one half of the aluminum tubing it cools and condenses into a liquid. This liquid passes through an expansion valve and evaporates becoming cold, low-pressure gas that passes through the other half of the aluminum tubing and cools the air. Two fans do the rest of the work; one blows air outside across the hot side tubing and the other blows cool air inside across the cool tubing. Voila – the end of summer sweating. –J.M.

The Five Most Expensive Homes in the Hamptons

According to Forbes Magazine, when Jerry Seinfeld bought Billy Joel's East Hampton home two years ago for $32 million, it was the largest sale ever made in the Hamptons. And the Hamptons are home to some extravagant houses. There are tons of places worth more than a couple million dollars. Nevertheless, there are some homes that sit at the top of the million dollar food chain.

So what are the top five homes in the Hamptons?

5. The Ira Rennert home in Sagaponack. Anytime there is a top five home listing, this house is on it. It gets number five only because it isn't even finished yet. But it is the biggest residential home in the United States, bigger even than the White House. It must make Dubya cringe every time he thinks about it.

Ira Rennert's home

4. Turpins Castle in Southampton. It is called The Castle for a reason; the turret on top really makes it look like one. The turret originally created quite a stir around town, with it being too high for Turpins' neighbors, and because the design did not quite fit in with the landscape of the town. What actually separates this house from the others, making it significant despite the lack of a price tag, is the grotto inside; they are not very common around here. For years the property has been on and off the market; it is off today. But just because there is no price tag on the house does not make it any less significant.

3. "Burnt Point" in Wainscott. David Campbell was asking for a mere $50 million when he put it on the market. He came down on the price and accepted an offer of $49 million according to Forbes Magazine. It looks as though the deal might come undone, however, as the buyer has reportedly been unable to pay the agreed upon deposit. If the sale does in fact go through though, it will surpass Seinfeld's 2000 purchase by $17 million. Campbell, president of Global Minerals and Metals, bought the property for $10 million in 1996. Not bad for a seven year investment.

2. "Eothen" in Montauk. Also on the market right now with a $50 million price tag. If a buyer is found at that number, it will eclipse even the potential "Burnt Point" sale. "Eothen" means "toward east" in Greek, which perfectly suits a sizable Montauk home. It is owned by director Paul Morrisey, responsible for many of Andy Warhol's 1970's films. There are four guesthouses in addition to the seven-bedroom main house, and the property as a whole sits in the middle of 122 acres of open land. Talk about privacy.

1. Jerry Seinfeld's new home in East Hampton, formerly the Billy Joel home. It still stands as the largest home sale ever contracted in the Hamptons, though it does not look like that title will hold out for much longer. It was originally very specifically designed for Billy Joel and then wife Christy Brinkley, with separate studios installed so each could work while at the house. The house is actually set on the water, joining together four different properties, totaling about 15 acres of land, with a main house, a guest house, a vacant lot and a nature conserve. In fact, the only thing between the main house and the water is five acres' worth of nature preserve.

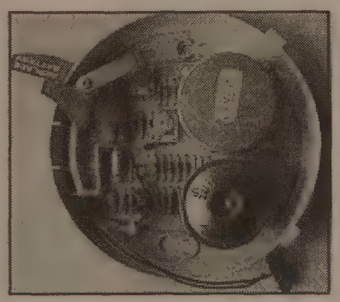
Inside The Exciting World Of A Smoke Detector

If you've ever taken the cover off a smoke detector you know that they are pretty simple. The most common type of smoke detector found in the home is an ionization smoke detector.



The main component of a smoke detector is the ionization chamber—an aluminum can containing the ionization source. The ionization chamber consists of two plates with voltage across them, along with a radioactive source of ionizing radiation. The can itself acts as the negative plate of the ionization chamber. The aluminum covers a ceramic holder that contains the positive plate of the ionization chamber. Under that plate is the ionization source, Don't touch it; it's radioactive containing a tiny amount (perhaps 1/5000th of a gram) of americium-241).

The alpha particles generated by the americium ionize the oxygen and nitrogen atoms of the air in the chamber. When a particle is ionized it loses an electron. That free electron (with a negative charge) and the now positively charged atom are the keys to the smoke detector. The negative electron is attracted to the plate with a positive voltage, and the positive atom is attracted to the plate with a negative voltage (it's true: opposites attract). The electronics in the smoke detector sense the small amount of electrical current that occurs during ionization.

Say you burn toast and smoke enters the ionization chamber, it disrupts this current – the smoke particles attach to the ions and neutralize them. The smoke detector senses the drop in current between the plates and sets off that annoying buzz causing you to take the nine-volt battery out of your smoke detector.

Some fire facts:

The fire detector was invented in 1969 by Randolph Smith and Kenneth House.

Each year fire kills an estimated 4,000 Americans and injures an additional 30,000.

About two-thirds of our nation's fire deaths happen in the victims own home and tend to occur between 11 p.m. and 6 a.m. when people are more likely to be asleep.

Most deaths occur from inhaling smoke or poisonous gas, not from flames.

A study found that 75 percent of residential fire deaths and 84 percent of residential fires could have been prevented by smoke detectors. –John Capone

Gardening With Guinness

Sometimes it is amazing what you can find in the Guinness Book of World Records. Did you know that the Largest Garden in the world is in Versailles, France? It takes up 15,000 acres worth of land and was built by Andre Le Notre for Louis XIV. That was the guy who got his head cut off in the guillotine by Robespierre to kick off the first French Republic. Louis XIV, I mean, not Robespierre. I guess it was guilt before all that happened.

But they are not the most visited garden in the world. The Most Visited Garden is in England; or rather the two most visited gardens are in England. The Most Visited Free Garden is Hampton Court in London. In 1996 they got two million visitors to come by. The Most Visited Garden With A Fee is the Royal Botonic Gardens in Kew, Surrey. They got 1,000,015 visitors to come the same year, but at least they all paid.

The Royal Botonic Gardens also reigns as the garden with the Most Tallest Trees. There you will find all of the tallest known specimen of the 138 different species of trees living inside. At least we know where all the money went from the fee.

Royal Botonic should talk to the Bridgemere Garden Center the next time they want to add another species to their collection. Bridgemere is the Biggest Garden Center in the world. They have 25 acres of land, 340 workers, 1.8 million visitors and three million sales every year. Who knows where their money goes every year.

The Largest Beach Front Garden is in Brazil, along Santos Beach. I've never been there but I hear it's beautiful. The garden has 719 flowerbeds, 1,746 trees in 20 different species, a 17,214 foot long path going through the garden, and 38 people who work and maintain it all year long.

You can find the Largest Rose Garden in Cavriglia, Italy, with 7,500 varieties of Roses, but the Largest Ever Bouquet was put together by the Missouri Botanical Garden with 28,801 total flowers. Not all of them were roses, but I'll bet somebody's wife or girlfriend was happy.

You are probably wondering where to find the Largest Permanent Hedge Maze in the world. That is also in the United States, at the Dole Pineapple Plantation in Honolulu. The Dole Pineapple Garden Maze covers 100,000 square feet of land, and contains the longest path for any permanent hedge maze at 1.7 miles long. I guess, if you can't find your way out of the maze, they figured you can always live off Pineapples to survive.

Any one of these gardens could benefit from having a new Robomow RL500. The RL500 is the Best Selling Robot Lawnmower in the world. Over 300 units have been sold since its conception in 1999. It costs 499 British Pounds, and can hold up to 5,000 square meters of grass; the equivalent of two tennis courts.

Maybe they could borrow Ann Atkia's of Devon, UK collection of Gnomes and Pixies. She is owner of the Largest Gnome and Pixie Collection with 2,010 different gnomes and pixies she has been collecting since 1978. I'm not even sure what a Gnome or Pixie really is. Guinness defines the gnome as a mythical creature who guarded secret treasures in the woods and forests, and Pixies as the pranksters of the fairy world. But that sounds a little too much like a Leprechaun if you ask me.

How about the Largest Pumpkin ever grown? Gery Checkon of Altoona, PA weighed his pumpkin in at 1,131 pounds. But, my personal favorite, the Furthest Pumpkin Canon, was shot 4,491 feet at the Morton Pumpkin Festival in Illinois. That only weighed in at something around eight or ten pounds though.

The Largest Carrot weighed 18 pounds and three ounces, grown by John Evans in Palmer, Alaska. Bugs Bunny could have had a field day. The Largest Apple, however, weighed in at three pounds, 11 ounces. Somewhere, I am sure, a doctor decided to close up shop.

As I said, it is really amazing what you can find in the Guinness Book of World Records. It may be even more amazing what some people will do to get inside it. But I guess, if someone's going to do it, there might as well be a record of it. –Brian Zapin

What Can You Get For $1,800?

EITHER

A Qwanzan Flowering Cherry Tree from Marders Bridgehampton Nursery, about five inches in diameter and approximately sixteen feet tall. The tree can actually be purchased for $1,200 if you have a private landscaper to put it in the ground for you. Otherwise you will probably want to have the nursery plant it for you. It will cost $1,800 for Marders to do it, but they may be able to give you a small discount if you ask nicely.

The cherry tree, according to Marders, is one of the most popular trees sold. It was named for a mountain in Japan, according to the National Park Service, grows mostly in East Potomac Park in Washington D.C., and blooms sometime around Mother's Day each year. It would be like giving a present every year without trying. It will be fully in bloom when you buy it from Marders.

The branches of a Kwanzan Cherry Tree "bear heavy clusters of clear pink" flowers. There is the Fugenzo, a rosy pink flower, and the Shirofugen, a white bud which turns pink when it ages. When mature, it is also wider than it is tall. In 1912, First Lady Taft was given 3,020 cherry trees in twelve different varieties from Japan, says the National Park Service. Mrs. Taft used those trees to line the Potamac River in order to "beautify" the area. Two species now dominate the cherry tree line, the Yoshino and the Kwanzan.

The Kwanzan Cherry Tree is not a fruit tree. There is nothing to eat off of it. It is a beautiful flowering tree that radiates springtime when properly maintained. An unobstructed view of the sun is paramount for it and leads to the finest blossoms possible. They also adapt most efficiently to soil that is well drained with a high amount of organic matter. If you purchase the cherry tree from Marders, they will put down soil, compost and fertilizer for you. You will also get a two-year health guarantee on it, with the only condition that you "be considerate with watering." That means all you have to do is give it water whenever necessary. About once a week should be appropriate if there is not much rain coming down.

OR

A long weekend at the Ritz Carlton in San Juan, Puerto Rico. Food, drinks, and souvenirs are left up to you, but for $1,800, including airfare, two of you can stay for three nights and four days in August at the five star hotel, in a room with either one king size bed or two doubles, and a full ocean view.

The Ritz Carlton is close to everything, so there is plenty to see with a quick cab ride. It is only fifteen minutes from the Historical Old San Juan and the more modern San Juan business districts, as wells as the Plaza Las Americas, Latin America's largest shopping center. If you feel like taking an invigorating day trip, El Yunque, Puerto Rico's tropical rainforest, is just 45 minutes away. It is the only tropical rainforest in the US system.

The hotel is also on eight acres of "prime" beach front property in Isla Verde, not to mention the six championship golf courses or remote diving and snorkeling areas close at hand. They also have all of the sailing, fishing, water skiing and horseback riding you can handle.

There is a freshwater pool and a couple of tennis courts on the grounds too, just in case you do not feel the need to venture beyond the hotel boundaries. They have three restaurants and four bars in the hotel, and the Ritz Carlton - San Juan is the first Ritz to contain a casino, so there is plenty of evening entertainment in the hotel as well. They made sure to build the casino and the hotel in line with the common artistic tradition of Puerto Rico, using local artists to cover all the walls so it should be fun to be inside too.

If you feel like sending post cards while you're there, at least you will not have to worry about how much the postage will be. A post card from Puerto Rico costs the same to send as one from New York or California. –Brian Zapin

SWEET SUMMER SCENTS

Ahhhh.. summer is finally just about here! And along with this awakening comes the arrival of wonderful new scents of summer. Whether you are in the mood for something floral or sexy, playful or downright sinful, beachy or stormy... whatever your mood, whatever the day, your scent is waiting to be chosen.

Don't you just envy those who seem to be able to fall asleep at the drop of a hat? I think that just being relaxed at the end of the day, surrounding ourselves with dreamy scents, both in the bath and bed, is one of the biggest factors to a most restful night's sleep. A night where a breeze is blowing softly through the curtains, soft music, not the news playing in the background, sets the stage for the most restorative sleep possible.

The Thymes has an array of the most sensual scents for relaxing and lulling you into that place that is sometimes so hard to reach. Sweet Dreams has become an all time favorite of mine since stumbling upon it with a friend up in a Cape Cod shop. Sweet Dreams Effervescent Bath Tablets condition the skin and soothe the senses with Rose Oil, Chamomile and Valerian. This bath tablet helps you unlock sleep's active dream stage, for a memorable night's sleep. ($3.50)

Sweet Dreams Tension Spot Relief has the same scent that gives immediate relief to pressure points when rubbed gently before retiring. Massage into the base of your neck and shoulders to soothe away muscular tension. ($14.00)

My favorite is the Thymes Sweet Dreams Mist for Body and Bed ($29.00). Sprayed lightly on your sheets and pillowcases, the captivating scent can invite you into the most peaceful place you have ever inhabited. I spray my nightclothes as well. Used after a shower, it will bring you a sense of relaxation that will begin to make you associate the scent with sleep. The company makes a wide array of scents, candles, soap, colognes and much more. To find out where The Thymes products are sold nationwide and to request a complimentary catalog or to place an order, you may call 1-800-661-8850 or visit the website at www.thymes.com.

And now that eveyone is nice and calm.. it's time to rise and shine!.. Shine ,that is, on Friday, May 24th. On this date, passengers who ride the Hampton Jitney will receive a full size (1.7 oz) bottle of tommy summer cologne, which made their debut last month. For him, tommy summer cologne is a clean, masculine scent comprised of a refreshing citrus fragrance.A frosted blend of bitter orange, mandarin and tangerine provide an invigorating vibration. A cool wet blast of ozone balanced with aromatic notes captures the feeling of a summer day. Toss in a hint of chipote wood and you have the makings of the perfect scent for your honey! It comes contained in the classic-shaped masculine tommy bottle tinted a serene sky blue. For her tommy girl summer cologne is a crisp, pure, carefree scent. The scent offers a blend of tangerine, bitter orange and grapefruit. The heart of this fragrance is reminiscent of honeysuckle and muguet petals, exploding with a dewy sensation of windswept florals. For the ladies, the bottle's crisp red color is just the finishing touch for this memorable fragrance. All tommy scents are available at fragrance counters and in tommy's shops within select depart-

Hangover Helper

Sweet smiles the May!
The forest gay
From frost and ice is freed.
No snow is found,
Glad songs resound
Across the verdant mead.
(From Goethe, "Die erste Walpurgisnacht")

Walpurgisnacht, the German word for the celebration the night before May Day (literally: May eve) has become synonymous with overindulgence. Walpurgisnacht was made famous by the decadent scene of the same name in Goethe's Faust, and is also the title of the second act in Edward Albee's Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?, an example of the word's broader usage. It is not a common practice on the East End to celebrate either May Day or the eve before it, but we always have Memorial Day to account for our own overindulgence and the hangovers that will surely follow, just as day follows night.

In a quest to defeat the dreaded hangover I participated in my own bit of Walpurgisnacht. I first went undercover at the Shinnecock Fishing Station in Hampton Bays – a fine place for this sort of research. But let's not get ahead of ourselves. To beat a hangover, we first have to really understand the hangover. A hangover is not caused by the alcohol consumed. The hangover is caused mainly by nasty byproducts of alcohol called cogeners, dehydration and the depletion of essential vitamins (notably C and B). Cogeners occur naturally in all fermented drinks. The darker they are the more you get. Unpasteurized, naturally fermented beer with no preservatives actually contains more of these naturally occurring impurities. That's why a night of drinking micro-brews at The Publick House always leaves you feeling particularly hoary the next morning.

One of the keys to fighting a hangover is hydration. Alcohol is a diuretic. This means that you lose fluids more rapidly than they are going in – think of all those trips to the bathroom. Your constant urination is the prime route of escape for vitamins and minerals. Drink water while you're out, if possible, and definitely as much as you can as soon as you get home. Gatorade, which resupplies all the electrolytes that a high-performance drinker loses, is actually helpful as well. Whatever it is you drink to hydrate, swallow a heavy-duty multivitamin with it. Aussie Kate swears by Vegamite spread on toast to replenish vitamins.

While out doing my research I casually mention my quest to a friend. "Take one of these," she says. "It's sure to help." She hands me a Percocet. This is a bad idea if the goal is hangover prevention. Percocet is an analgesic, and any analgesic taken at this point – from aspirin to Acetaminophen – will only heighten your hangover symptoms the morning after by worsening dehydration, stomach pain and nausea, as well as helping to short-circuit your nervous system. Don't think that you will be able to stop the skull-rattling headache heading straight for your cerebellum like an amped-up Jitney Driver by taking an aspirin six hours before it comes. There will be time enough for aspirin in the morning. My recommendation for morning headache pain is Excedrin Migraine.

Speaking of the morning. Skip the coffee. Caffeine is another diuretic, and you will be undoing all your noble efforts at hydration. However, if you are the type who is at least trying to hit bottom, drinking more always helps. Sometimes this cure is called "Hair of the Dog," or simply "Drink More." Whatever you call it, it works wonders as a last resort. If you haven't hydrated, can't get your hands on a multivitamin, Gatorade, or orange juice,

HEALTH & BEAUTY

An Involuntary Diaphram Spasm Cure (aka: Hiccups)

In Dutch they are "hikken," in Danish "nulke," in Japanese "shakkuri," in French "hoquet," in Hungarian "csuklas" and there are five words for them in Swahili: "chechevu," "kekevu," "kikwifukwifu," "kitefutefu" and "kwikwi." Here in the States we call them hiccups.

It's rather remarkable that we live in an age in which organs are transplanted from one person to another, scientists can clone sheep and we travel to space, but despite our modestly advanced technological civilization, no one knows why we get hiccups. Sure, we know that hiccups are an involuntary spasm of the diaphragm and there is speculation that it may be caused by the misfiring of the phrenetic nerve or low levels of carbon dioxide in the bloodstream – but we don't know for sure.

And no one likes to get the hiccups, though they usually only last for a few minutes, and there is nothing detrimental to one's health from getting them. But we all want them gone as soon as we get them. This wasn't a reality for Charles Osbourne, who holds the Guinness Book of World Records title as the person who had the longest case of the hiccups – 69 years and five months. He hiccuped every 1-1/2 seconds until one morning they just stopped. To avoid a fate like that of poor Charles, use the remedies below compiled from the staff at Dan's Papers.

Tickle: This is a good cure, especially for kids, and just think, even if it doesn't work you can have a lot of fun tickling the hiccuper. Note: you cannot tickle yourself, this won't work.

Hyperventilate: Grab a bag, create a firm seal around your mouth and blow in and out forcefully until you are very red in the face. This will at least get your friends laughing if it doesn't cure you outright.

Breath Holding: This is one of the more popular cures. There is some debate over how long you should hold your breath. Some sources say ten seconds, others seven and still others say to hold it until you can't hold it anymore. One person said you should hold your breath and then continue to take small inhalations until you feel like you might pass out. Another said hold it and then slowly inhale and exhale afterwards – the so called mini-yoga cure.

Scare: Everybody has probably heard about this treatment, but it is very difficult to successfully scare the hiccuper because more often than not he is expecting to be scared and that just doesn't work. It's worth a try though, and if you succeed please let me know.

Tongue Yank: This can be a painful but effective treatment. Grab the end of your tongue and pull hard. DO NOT JERK THE TONGUE. (That can be very painful.)

Orange Soda: Only one person reported that this was an effective treatment. Simply drink orange soda very fast and that'll do it. Maybe.

Eyeball Massage: This is a two-person process. The hiccuper should close his eyes and the non-hiccuper should place his forefingers on the temples of the hiccupper and his thumbs on the closed eyes. (The eyes MUST be closed.) Make small circles on the eyeballs ment stores nationwide. For more info you can call 646-602-7551. Also, passengers will also receive an invitation to stop by the Macy's Herald Square Tommy Hilfiger fragrance counter on the main floor between May 27th-May31st to receive a Tommy Hilfiger weekend travel bag (perfect for the weekends to the Hamptons). And, anyone can enter to win a Sony Wega television.

For all you Estee Lauder Pleasures addicts (guilty, as charged; I admit!) they are taking a new lateral approach by reinventing this lovely, floral frangrance into a Liquid Summer Spray. Imagine the scent of the original Pleasures, then take it down an bit, lighten it, and set it flowing into the air for a few moments before stepping into it. There! You've got a sweet, romantic version of the original gorgeous scent, only lighter. Perfect for summer days in the Hamptons, evenings on a stroll, or just unleashed anywhere. A real head turner like its older sister, Pleasures, Liquid Summer Spray is a must for Summer 2002. You can purchase this gorgeous pink and white wavy lined bottle at Macy's and other fine department stores where Estee Lauder is sold. You know where to look for it!

Donna Karan has created an electric energy for HIM and HER. What is this? Dual scents seem to be the rage this summer! Picture, taxis whizzing by, outdoor concerts, Shakespeare in the Park, East River Fireworks. The pulse points of NY. These two special edition scents capture that NYCs pace. Get this for her: DKNY Energy for Women; a medley of summer sensations, a top note of rain soaked fennel stalks, iced cucumbers, seaside honeysuckle and water lentils.In the middle budding fig leaves, green calimyrna fig and blossoming blue water hyacinths. Hmmm... sounds good enough to eat, huh? Ahh...Wear it! You are certain to get the "what are you wearing's from everyone! Available for a limited time only, at select specialty and department stores nationwide. ($38.00)

And for you guys: DKNY Energy for Men. This is the scent that works with vitality, men! Similar notes are found as in the women's version but added to the top note is raw nutmeg and eucalyptus buds. A bottom layer of drenched cedar and guaiac wood. Inspired by the man who lives in perpetual motion... hmmm... sounds wonderful to me($35.00)!

Better run for them! They are only going to be here for a NY Minute exclusively for the summer of 2002!

Have a scentful summer!

you'll still be feeling fine by the end of that second Bloody Mary. You can even wash it down with some coffee.

Putting your pain to good use is maybe the best medicine yet; call up some self-righteous charlatan and get your frustrations out. Such charlatans can be found at www.drinklinkmoderation.com, a web site offering a drinking moderation program for $59.95 (plus $6.96 shipping and handling includes motivational audio tape). They can be called toll free at 888-77-DRINK. Scream, holler – whatever you want. You will be in agony; the least you can do is make sure someone else is too. This way it's someone deserving. Or, in the hideous case that you have to be at work the next morning, put the office fax to good use and clog drinkinmoderation.com's fax machine. Their fax number is 707-537-1010. Just please be creative with what you send them. –John Capone

POLICE BLOTTER

A Bridgehampton Cowboy went buck-wild last Saturday, driving his '85 Buick (whooowee she's a beaut'!) down Bridgehampton Turnpike. According to Southampton Town Police, Cowboy, as most know him, hit a pedestrian before speeding away. Police soon caught up to him and were able to corral the 52-year-old Bridgehampton resident.

Police in Amagansett were called last Sunday to a violent dispute between two neighbors. The violence began when an argument, over some children playing in the yard, drove one of the two men to leave and return with a 3-foot length of lumber. The man swung a few times, narrowly missing his neighbor's head, before damaging the front door, the screen door and the bay window of the victim's house. Police charged the swinger with menacing in the second degree.

Speaking of going overboard, Sag Harbor Fire Department pulled a 65-year-old North Haven resident from the waters near Sunset Beach Road last Wednesday. Just a few minutes after the man had launched his small boat, a friend heard him yell for help but couldn't see where he was. As the skies grew darker Sag Harbor FD and Ambulance Squad, US Coast Guard, Suffolk County Sheriff's Department and Aviation Unit and Southampton Town Police work quickly to locate the man, pull him from the water and transport him to Stony Brook Medical Center for treatment of hypothermia.

Two questions: "Who stole $170 from the locked locker of an East Hampton High School Lacrosse player?" and, "Why the hell is a high school student carrying $170 to school?" In any case, the money disappeared during afternoon practice last Thursday. The boy is the only one that knows his combination so he and police are baffled as to who may have stolen the cash.

As most of us know and respect, the Southampton Town Police Department is one of the hardest working and most alert law enforcement agencies in the country. Their diligence aside, it isn't often that a pair of wanted criminals will walk right into headquarters (like shootin' fish in a barrel). Last Wednesday just that happened, three men walked into Hampton Bays Headquarters and were being very rude about retrieving a car that they thought was impounded there. To their dismay the car wasn't there, but a pair of outstanding warrants from NYPD were. The attitude of the three men caused the Public Safety Dispatcher to do a quick records check where he found an outstanding warrant for a 27-year-old Virginia native for resisting arrest and another for his father, age 47 from Virginia, for criminal possession of a forged instrument. The 27-year-old was also charged with aggravated unlicensed operation of the car he drove to headquarters to pick up the car he thought was impounded.

Kids know that you shouldn't take candy from strangers, but a Mastic Beach man found this out at a later age. He told police that he was giving a Riverhead man a ride to his house on Old Quogue Road when the man offered him a painkiller. He took the pill (smart move, buddy) and later found himself waking up in his car without any jewelry on. The Riverhead man had only relieved the pain that the excess weight of gold and diamonds brings to your wrists and knuckles. Further investigation by police led them to a pawnshop in Patchogue to where the man's jewelry had been sold. As of press time, this case is still under investigation and no suspects have pinpointed.

Well, I may as well end this week's police blotter with a bang. A 27-year-old Westhampton resident was arrested at his job as a tennis court technician after hitting a co-worker in the head with a shovel. The man was charged with felony assault in the second degree after the incident as they worked at a Little Noyac Path residence in Water Mill.

Dan's LETTERS

ANOTHER SATISFIED CUSTOMER
Dear Dan,

A heartfelt thank you for your generous donation to this year's Silent Auction at Windows on Long Island Wine. We have received an overwhelmingly positive response to the event. People are raving about the art, the raffle, the quality of the wine and food and the beauty of the space. The great energy that was put out by all participants really reached our guests.

Art plays a crucial role in our lives and we were honored to have the chance to bring your work to this year's silent auction. Your involvement helps to support not only Long Island Wineries but also our commitment to promoting sustainable agriculture and cuisine. We were thrilled to meet you and hope to see you again next year.

Dear Dan,

Where are your proof-readers? This is the most hated English mistake. Would you say "this for he"?

This is almost as bad as hearing "more importantly" instead of More important." One hears this by TV anchor persons constantly.. Doesn't someone tell them this is wrong?

Sorry about that.

and the hiccups should disappear.

Ear Plug/Tug: This is another two-person technique. The hicupper places his fingers in his ears and creates a seal while the non-hiccuper holds a glass of water for the hiccuper to drink. The tug involves grasping the left earlobe with the right hand fingertips and the right earlobe with the left hand finger tips. Again the non-hiccuper holds a glass of water for the afflicted.

Upside Down Water: Take a glass of water, spread your legs slightly, place your lower lip on the far side of the glass and invert. Drink until you can't drink anymore.

Toothbrush: It is uncertain whether to put any faith in this cure (one source swears by it), but the hiccuper can try and drink a glass of water with a toothbrush held in front of the teeth. A variation on this is to place the toothbrush under the tongue and drink a glass of water.

Food: A number of foods are said to cure the hiccups. A tablespoon of peanut butter, bitters on a wedge of lemon and peppermint are all said to work.

Sugar: This the most effective cure. Nineteen out of twenty people are cured of their hiccups by eating a teaspoon of sugar.

If none of these work then contact Guinness and start working on your own record. –J.M.

WATERFIELD
Financial Corporation

In 1928, Richard Waterfield thought nothing of getting in his car and driving 160 miles (each way) to hand deliver the paperwork to ensure a fast closing on a home loan. Making sure that a client could purchase a home quickly and easily was just his way of doing business. Today, this same philosophy separates Waterfield from other mortgage companies.

We believe, as many small businesses do, that each individual deserves our complete attention and commitment. Unlike other big lenders who make you wait through the days of red tape, our front line people can make quick decisions right in the field. Our dedication to customer satisfaction has enabled us to expand nationwide, despite the ever-changing real estate market. Because of our growth, we now have the resources of a large corporation. Waterfield is the largest privately-held mortgage company in the country with offices nationwide. This stability means that we will remain in the market to honor terms and service mortgage payment for years to come.

Since 1928, Waterfield has specialized in mortgage lending. Our team has the resources and expertise to provide for the best service possible, throughout each step of the process. Our high level of customer satisfaction from time of application through closing and into loan servicing has enabled us to become the oldest and largest privately-held mortgage banking firm in the United States.
